Memoria De Soteria.

THE TRACY'S

The following, compiled from the celebrated works of the Hyde's and Tracy's, by Chancellor Reuben H. Walworth, proves that Lieut. Thomas Tracy, of Norwich, Conn., was a direct descendant of the Saxon Kings, of England.

The Princess Gode, youngest daughter of King Ethelred II, his last wife was Emma, of Normandy, daughter of Richard I, Duke of Normandy, held lands in Gloucestershire in the reign of her brother, King Edward the Confessor, (see 2, Ellis' Domesday book, 119), which lands remain in the hands of her descendants at this time. She married for her first husband, Dreux, Count of Vexin, called by English historians, Walter de Mante, Count of Mantes. He was great grand-son of Waleran who succeeded Hugh, the great Duke of France, father of Hugh Capet, as count of Vexin, in 956, and is said to be descended from Emperor Charlemagne and Hildegarde of Swabia, his wife. He went on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and died in Bythinia, about the first of July, 1035, and she died in 1054. They had four sons: first, Gauther, same name as Walter; second, Rudolph or Ralph; third, Toulgues; fourth, Poutoise.

General Rudolph or Ralph de Mantes, their second son was Lord of the Manor of Sudeley and of Toddington, which he inherited from his mother. He was created Earl of Hereford by his uncle, Edward the Confessor, of which earldom his son was deprived in the reign of William the Conqueror. He married Gethe, who held lands in her own right in Buckinghamshire, and who, in Domesday book, is called Gethe, wife of Earl Rudolph.

He died the 21st of Dec., 1057, and was buried at Petersborough.

Harold de Mantes, their only son, married Matilda, daughter of Hugh Lupus, the first Earl of Chester, and Ermitrude his wife, and had by her two sons, John de Sudeley and Robert de Ewas.

John, the eldest son, inherited the lands of his father, in Gloucestershire, and became John de Sudeley, Lord of Sudeley and Toddington. He married Grace Tracy, daughter and heiress of Henry de Tracy, Feudal Lord of Barnstable, in Devonshire. They had two sons, Ralph the heir of the father, and William de Sudeley, who inherited the lands of his mother, and assumed her family name of Tracy.

Sir William Tracy, the second son, knight of Gloucestershire held lands at Toddington to the extent of one knights fee, from his brother Ralph de Sudely. He was one of the knights who, at the command of Henry II, assassinated Thomas A. Becket. He died in Devonshire and was buried in the church of Marthoe, (see Fuller's church history, Polwheles history of Devonshire.)

Sir Oliver Tracy, his eldest son and heir, was one of the knights of Gloucestershire in the time of King John, and as early as 1695 he was in possession of the estates of Barnstable.

William Tracy, his son, of Toddington, was in arms against King John in 1215, and his property was confiscated, but it was restored to him by Henry III, about 1217. He married Hawis de Born, and died about 1224.

Henry Tracy, his son and heir, of Toddington, died about 1246, and had two sons and one daughter.

Henry Tracy, of Toddington, his eldest son and heir, was presented to the church of Marthoe, in Devonshire, in 1275.

Sir William Tracy, of Toddington, his son and heir, was one of the knights of Gloucestershire in 1290, and had a command in the Scottish war.

His son, William Tracy of Toddington, was a ward of Lawrence Tresham in 1300. He was one of the knights of Gloucestershire, and was sheriff for five years, commencing in 1324. In 1313 he was elected to Parliament as one of the knights of Gloucestershire, and again in 1321. (The office of sheriff in those days was a situation of great dignity and importance, very different from now.)

William Tracy, of Toddington, his son and heir, had a mandate to raise troops for the King, in the seventh Edward III, from the county of Gloucestershire.

Sir John Tracy, of Toddington, his son and heir, was in Parliament as one of the knights of Gloucestershire in 1357, and was sheriff in 1368-1369.

Sir John Tracy, his eldest son, of Toddington, was a member of Parliament, he was sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1378, and died in 1379.

William Tracy, of Toddington, his son and heir, was sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1395, and died in 1399.

William Tracy, of Toddington, his son and heir, was sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1418, and in 1431 was called to the privy council of King Henry VI. He married Alice, the widow of William Gifford, and daughter and heiress of Guy de la Spine, Lord of the manor of Coughton, in Warwickshire.

William Tracy, of Toddington, their eldest son and heir, was sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1443-1444-1450. He married Margaret Pauncefort, daughter of Sir John Pauncefort and Margaret Beauchamp, his first wife.

Henry Tracy, Esq., of Toddington, their eldest son and heir, married Alice Baldington, daughter and co-heiress of Thomas Baldington, Esq., of Alderly, and died about 1506.

Sir William Tracy, of Toddington, their eldest son and heir, was sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1513. He married Margaret Trockmorton, daughter of Sir Thomas Trockmorton of Ass Court, and Margaret Ordney, his wife, and grand-daughter of Sir John Trockmorton, who married Eleanor, daughter and co-heiress of Sir Guy de la Spine, Lord of the manor of Coughton in Warwickshire, and died about 1531. He was one of the first who embraced the reformed religion, in the time of King Henry VIII.

In his will, instead of leaving his soul to God through the intercession of the Virgin Mary and the rest of the Saints, according to the then common form, he stated briefly his belief as a Christian, and his hope of salvation by the grace and merit of the Saviour, and then proceeds as follows: "As touching the wealth of my soul, the faith that I have taken and rehearsed is sufficient as I suppose without any other man's works or merits. My ground and belief is that there is but one God and one mediator between God and man, which is Jesus Christ. So that I accept none other in heaven or earth to mediate between me and God, all others to be but petitioners in receiving grace, and therefore will I bestow no part of my goods for the intent that any man shall say or do ought to help my soul. For therein I trust only to the promises of Christ. He that believeth and is baptised shall be saved, and he who believes not shall be damned." This will was condemned as heretical, and the testator's body was raised and burned in 1532. He left two sons: first, William, who was ancestor of the Viscounts Tracy, of Rathcoole, in the peerage of Ireland, and of Robert Tracy, who was one of the English judges from 1700 to 1726; second, Richard Tracy.

Richard Tracy, Esq., of Stanway, the second son, was sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1559. He obtained grants of lands from the Crown at Stanway and at Beckford, in the county which had belonged to the suppressed Abbey of Tewksbury, (see first Plow., Rep. 7145.) He was a man of good education, and prior to the death of Edward VI, wrote several treatises in defence of his fathers' faith, the most remarkable of which was entitled "Preparations for the Cross," written in 1550. He married Barbara Lucy, pupil of Fox, the Martyrologist, she was daughter of Thomas Lucy, of Charlecote, in Warwickshire, and it was her nephew on whom Shakespeare took revenge, by writing in one of his plays as Justice Shallow, as it was before Sir Thomas Lucy, Shakespeare was arraigned for deer stealing. Richard Tracy, Esq., of Stanway, and Barbara Lucy had three sons and three daughters. He was sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1560, Barbara

Lucy, his wife, was a descendant in the sixteenth generation from Hugh de Mountfort, son of Gilbert de Gamet and Alice Mountfort, and great grand-son of Baldwin V. Count of Flanders, who married Alice, daughter of Robert II, King of France. Through her ancestress, Judith, wife of Baldwin, the first Count of Flanders, Barbara Lucy was descended from the Emperor Charlemagne, and through his ancestors, Alfritha, wife of Baldwin II, Count of Flanders, she was descended from Alfred the Great, and other Saxon kings of England.

Nathaniel Tracy, of Tewksbury, their second son received lands from his father at that place.

Lieut. Thomas Tracy, son of Nathaniel Tracy, came from Tewksbury, where he was born, in 1610, to New England. He landed at Salem, where he stayed until Feb. 23, 1637. He came over in the interest of his friends, Lord Say and Lord Brooks. He soon left the bay for the old colony on the Connecticut river in 1640, and there married the widow Mason in 1641, at Wethersfield, afterward moved to Saybrook, named after his friends. 'Tis an old, substantial, euphonious name, interesting from its historical associations. Lord Say and Lord Brook with their associates were the patentees of Connecticut. Their patent was received from Robert, Earl of Warwick, in 1632, and extended along the New England coast, westward from the Narragansett river 120 miles, and in latitude and breadth to the South Sea. The Earl of Warwick was president of the Council of Plymouth, incorporated by King James the First, for the settlement of New England, and authorized to dispense grants and patents to others. The patents were therefore valid and clear. The place of immediate importance in this patent, was the point at the mouth of the Connecticut river. And here John Winthrop acting under commission from the patentees, built a fort and commenced a plantation in 1625 to 1636. The Pequot war followed soon after the establishment, and threatened the annihilation of the infant settlement. The fort was frequently surrounded by bloodthirsty savages.

Thomas Tracy had by his first wife, the widow Mason, seven children: first, John, born 1642; second, Thomas, about 1644; third, Jonathan, 1646; fourth, Miriam, about 1648; fifth, Solomon, 1651; sixth, Daniel, 1651; seventh, Samuel, 1654, who died in 1693, unmarried. The first two children were born in Nethersfield, the others in Saybrook, where he lived many years before removing to Norwich, Conn., where he was one of the proprietors of the nine mile grant.

John, Lieut. Thomas Tracy's first son, married Mary Winslow, June 10, 1670, resided in Duxbury, Mass. The bride was a daughter of Josiah Winslow, the elder, who was a brother to Gov. Edward Winslow, of Plymouth. It is a mistake about her being the daughter of John Winslow and his wife, of the Mayflower. (From Mrs. Calkin's celebrated book on Norwich.)

Thomas Tracy, second son, born 1642. The name of his wife is not recorded. He had eight children: Nathaniel, Sarah, Jeremiah, Daniel, Thomas, Jediah, Deborah and Jerusha. His will was dated April 6, 1721, but not proved until 1724.

Jonathan Tracy, third son of Lieut. Thomas, was born in 1648, and married Mary Griswold, July 11, 1672. Their children were: Jonathan, Jr., Hannah, Christopher and Mary.

Miriam Tracy, only daughter, the fourth child of Lieut. Thomas Tracy, was born in 1649. Married Thomas Waterman, Nov. 1668. Their children were: Thomas, John, Elizabeth, Miriam, Martha, Lydia and Waterman. Thomas Waterman, her husband, was one of the original proprietors of Norwich.

Thomas Waterman, her eldest son, married Elizabeth Allyn, and John, her second son, first married Elizabeth Lathrop, second, Judith Woodward, third, Elizabeth Bassett. He was the father of William Waterman, who married Margaret Tracy, and of Hannah Waterman, mother of Benedict Arnold, the traitor. Elizabeth Waterman, her eldest daughter, married Capt. John Fitch, of Windham, and had four children. Martha Waterman, her third daughter, married Deacon Reynold Marvin, of Lyme.

Dr. Solomon Tracy, fourth son of Lieut. Thomas, was born

1651. He first married Sarah Huntington, Nov. 23, 1676; second Sarah Bliss, widow of Thomas Sherman, April 8, 1686. Their children by the first wife were Lydia and Simon, and by second wife, Solomon Tracy. Simon died July 9, 1782.

Daniel Tracy, fifth son, born 1652, married Abigail Adgate, Sept. 9, 1682, second wife, Hannah Bingham, widow of Thomas Bingham, March 4, 1711. Their children by the first wife were Daniel and Abigail; by the second wife, Elizabeth and Samuel. Daniel Tracy, Sen., died July 29, 1728.

Samuel Tracy, sixth son, died June 11, 1693, without issue.

The youngest son of Thomas Tracy, who was the son of Lieut. Thomas Tracy, was Jedediah Tracy, of Preston, who died June 8, 1779. His father, Thomas Tracy, son of Lieutenant, died April 6, 1721.

Deacon Jedediah died at the age of 87 years. His death was caused by being thrown from a horse, (gay old fellow to be riding at that age) he had been deacon of his church fifty years. He was Magistrate and Representative of the town. He left one hundred and thirty-seven direct descendents. Good for you Jedediah.

Lieut. Thomas Tracy was evidently a man of talent and activity, skillful in the management of various kinds of business. He took great interest in ship-building, and did not think it a degradation to use his hands as well as his mind. The confidence placed in him by his associates is manifested in the great number of appointments which he received. His name is on the roll of the Legislature as representative of Norwich, at twenty-seven sessions. The elections were semi-annual, and Mr. Tracy was chosen twenty-one times, beginning October 9, 1662, and ending July 5, 1684. The others were extra sessions. In August 1673, he was lieutenant of the "New London County Dragoons," enlisting to fight the Dutch and Indians.

These six John Tracy's were in the line of primogeniture, and natives of Norwich, except the first one.

John Tracy, the second son, was born in 1673. He married Elizabeth Leflingwell, daughter of Thomas Leflingwell, the 2d, of Norwich. He was born Aug. 27, 1649. The eldest son Lieut. Thomas Leflingwell, was one of the original proprietors of Norwich. He was born at Croix Hall, England, and was one of the first settlers of Saybrook.

Thomas Leflingwell, the second son, came to Norwich in 1660, being then 11 years old. He married Mary Bushnell, who was born Jan. 8, 1655, at Saybrook. The eldest daughter of Richard Bushnell and Mary Marvin, of Saybrook.

John Tracy, third son, born 1702, married Margaret Hyde.

John Tracy, fourth son, was born at Norwich, Conn., Feb. 11, 1726, was the eldest son of John Tracy and Margaret Hyde, of Norwich. He married Oct. 13, 1747, his third cousin, Margaret Huntington, born Nov. 23, 1724, at Norwich, daughter of Christopher Huntington and Abigail Abel-Lathrop. His children by her were: John 5th, born at Norwich, married Lester Dridge; Mary, born April, 1750, at Norwich, married Andrew Hyde; Margaret, born May 20, 1753, at Norwich, married first, Zebediah Lathrop, second Benjamin Stors; Lydia, born 1775, died unmarried.

John Tracy, born at Norwich, Conn., Dec. 21, 1755, eldest son of John Tracy and Margaret Huntington. He married May 24, 1780, Esther Pride, of Lisbon. In 1806 they removed to Columbus, N. Y., where he died June 14, 1821.

His first son John, was born Oct. 26, 1783, at Norwich, married Susannah Hyde. He was a lawyer, and they settled at Oxford. He was Lieutenant Governor of the state for six years. They were living at Oxford in 1832. They had three children, born at Oxford. The first, John, born June 20, 1820. He was the seventh John in descent from Lieut. Thomas Tracy. This John died Dec. 24, 1820, living only a few months.

Lieut. Joshua Tracy, born at Norwich, Conn., Aug. 13, 1745. The seventh son of John Tracy and Margaret Hyde, of Norwich, was grand-son of John Hyde, of the third generation. He married, May 2 1771, Naoma Bingham, of Windham, born May 13, 1744, daughter of Jonathan Bingham and Mary Abbey, of Windham, grand-daughter of John Abbey, the first, of Windham, Mass. He died March, 1777, at Norwich, Conn., of small-pox, and was buried on the hill at Franklin, near Dr. Woodwards. Their children were: Abel, born April 26, 1772, at Norwich; Thomas, born May 23, 1774, at Norwich, was educated at Yale, and died at Baltimore, unmarried; Joshua, born Dec. 21, 1776, at Norwich, died Aug. 11, 1779.

Abel Tracy, son of Lieut. Joshua, was the grand-father of the celebrated artist, Mr. John Martin Tracy. His home for a few years has been Greenwich, Conn., where he moved from New York, as his specialty is cattle painting, for which he is famous. He left the Sophomore Class of the Northwestern University, of Evanston, Ill., to enlist in the army; he served through the war, reaching the grade of Lieutenant. After this war he went on a tour of the Eastern States, and forming the acquaintance of several artists, he decided to adopt the profession of painting. He went at once to Paris, and soon entered the Ecole des Beaux arts, and atelier of Isidor Pils, intending to become a painter of battles. After the death of his master, he went for some years under the instruction of Caroleas Daran, and he began an accidental but most encouraging career as a portrait painter. During the Franco-Prussian war, he was in America, and traveled for two years in California and the far west generally, returning to Paris in 1874. He married Melamia, daughter of August Guillman, the celebrated pastel portrait painter. His wife's family, on the father's side, have all been professional artists since a time when there is no record to the contrary. The brother of his wife, Emile Guillman, is to-day one of the most eminent of those sculptors who devote themselves to bronzes. Her mother is of the family of Chamflewey, the novelist and writer on Ceramics, etc.

JOHN MASON

THOMAS TRACY

This deed is recorded in the County Booke August 20, 1663:
as atests
JOHN ALLYN, Sec'y.

The bounds of this tract, as more particularly described in the first volume of the Proprietors' Records, were as follows:

The line commenced at the mouth of Trading Cove, where the brook falls into the cove; thence W. N. W. seven miles to a Great Pond, (now in the corner of Bozrah and Colchester,) the limit in this direction being denoted by a black oak marked N, that stood near the outlet of the "Great Brook that runs out of the pond to Norwich river;" thence N. N. E. nine miles to a black oak standing on the south side of the river (Shetucket) "a little above Waw-mi-ag-waug;" thence S. S. E. nine miles, crossing the Shetucket and the Quinebaug, and passing through "a Seader Swamp called Catantaquak," to a white oak tree marked N, thirteen rods beyond a brook called Quo-qui-qua-soug, the space from the Quinebaug to this tree being just one mile and fifty-eight rods; thence S. S. W. nine miles to a white oak marked N, near the dwelling-houses of Robert Allyn and Thomas Rose, where Norwich and New London bounds join; thence west on the New London bounds, crossing the southern part of Mr. Brewster's land, two miles to Mohegan river, opposite the mouth of Trading Cove brook, where the first bounds began.

Such were the bounds, as reviewed and renewed in October, 1685, by an authorized committee, accompanied by two sachems and some of the chief men of Mohegan. The former deed of 1659, with the boundaries thus described and explained, was then ratified and confirmed by "Owaneco, sachem of Mohegan, son and heire unto Owaneco," in a new deed, signed by them Oct. 5, 1685, witnessed by John Arnold and Stephen Gifford, and acknowledged before James Fitch, Assistant.

The southern boundary line, it will be observed, is nine miles in length, two east of the river, and seven west, without counting the breadth of the Thames, and the length of Trading Cove to the mouth of the brook, which would make this line nearly ten miles long. This is explained in the deed to be designed as a compensation for "the benefit and liberty of the waters and river for fishing and other occasions," reserved to the Indians.

FIRST HOUSE LOTS, 1660.

Extract from a half century sermon delivered in the First Society of Lisbon, Dec. 5, 1854, by the Rev. Levi Nelson, pastor of the First Congregational Church in that place.

The Tracy family, Lieut. Thomas Tracy, came from England, arrived at Salem, Mass., where he staid for a short time, removed to Saybrook, Conn., then to Norwich. His son Thomas settled in that part of Norwich which is now near Preston. Thomas Jr's, son Jeremiah, became a land holder in Newent, bordering on the Quinebaug river. He was one of the first settlers, and joined the church when it was organized in 1723. He was the father of Deacon Andrew Tracy.

Andrew Tracy, of Lisbon, Conn., was born Feb. 16, 1722, married Ruth Smith, daughter of Capt. Elija Smith, of Barnstable, Mass. She was born July 18, 1725. His first son was Ebenezer Tracy, born April 20, 1744. He first married Mary Freeman; second, Thankful Ayres; third, Anna Berry. Their children were: Eliza, Ziporah, Mary, Sarah, Lydia, the last was the mother of Mr. Henry Allen, of Norwich, Conn., Rebecca, Ebenezer, Jr. and Frederick, who died the same day he was born.

Jesse Tracy was born Dec. 20, 1745, married Faith Bingham. Their children were: Lucy, Jesse, Jr., Freeman, Hannah, Jedediah, Andrew, Erastus, Anna and Felix.

Sarah Tracy married Jedediah Lathrop, had ten children. The names and ages are on the City Records,

Andrew Tracy, Jr., married Anna Bingham, of Windham, Sept. 17, 1771. He died Dec. 28, 1819, aged 69 years. His wife Anna, died Sept. 8, 1827, aged 77 years. They had eight children: Lemuel Tracy, born July 29, 1763, died April 6, 1865, aged 82; Ruth Tracy, born March 30, 1775, died Oct. 17, 1856, aged 81; Lucy Tracy, born Nov. 4, 1777, died April 20, 1824, aged 47; Elias Tracy, born Jan. 22, 1780, died June 20, 1850, aged 70; Stephen Tracy, born July 2, 1782, died Oct. 23, 1836, aged 84; Anna Tracy, born Dec. 27, 1784, died March 1, 1829, aged 45; Andrew Tracy, Jr., born Jan. 25, 1789, died Jan. 8, 1861; Jesse Tracy, born March 31, 1792, died March 30, 1857, aged 65; Elijah Tracy died at the age of 11 years.

Ruth Tracy married Israel Herrick, had seven children, and died at LeRoy, N. Y., aged 85. Mary Tracy married Nathan Taylor. They had eight children. Anna Tracy married Farwell Coit, had two children. The son, who did not marry, was Erastus Coit. The daughter married a Mr. Reynolds.

Mary Tracy, third daughter of Andrew Tracy, born Sept. 9, 1756, and Nathan Taylor, born Jan. 1752, were married April 24, 1783. Their children were: Nathan, born May 25, 1785, died Jan. 1, 1865; Mary, born April 26, 1787, died May 8, 1872; Tracy, (twin to Mary) born April 26, 1787, died Feb. 23, 1832; John, born Dec. 20, 1789, died June 20, 1877; George, born January 5, 1793, died August, 1834; William, born March 18, 1795, died June 8, 1881; Lydia, born Oct. 6, 1797, died Sept. 18, 1885; Elias, born Jan. 5, 1800, died aged about 30.

Jeremiah Tracy was born at Lisbon, Conn., Saturday, April 11, 1761, married Martha Lascelle, May 19, 1785; Martha Lascelle Tracy, born Monday, March 25, 1765; Olive Tracy, born July 4, 1785; Jeremiah, born April 21, 1788; Susannah, born Wednesday, June 9, 1790; Martha Tracy, born Monday, July 2, 1792; Jerusha Tracy, born Thursday, July 10, 1794, died Monday, May 2, 1796; Erastus Tracy, born April 12, 1797. Second Jerusha Tracy, born Monday, Aug. 17, 1799; Maria Tracy, born Tuesday, Nov. 17, 1801; Calvin Tracy, born Saturday, Nov. 5, 1803; Luther Tracy, born Feb. 11, 1805; Joshua Tracy, born 1807, cannot give the month.

Elizabeth Tracy married Grover Le Hommedian. He had two wives: by his first wife he had thirteen children, by Elizabeth, his second wife, six, in all nineteen children. Nothing small about his family.

David Tracy married Susannah Capron; they had nine children. Mrs. Henry Allen, the wife of Mr. Henry Allen, of Norwich, Conn., and one of the oldest and most respected citizens, is the only one living of this large family. David died in Norwich, Conn. ; George died while descending the Mississippi river ; the Rev. William Tracy, a man of great purity and worth, went out to India, accompanied by his wife, who was in sympathy with him in his missionary labor. They and their children deeply lamented, now sleep in that far off land.

The descendants of Andrew Tracy are very numerous, and are to be found in many cities of the United States. Those of his daughter, Mary Tracy, who married Nathan Taylor, many are living in Philadelphia, Pa. Her son, Tracy Taylor, was the first to leave his New England home ; where his brothers George and William, soon followed him to Philadelphia. They were all interested in the iron business. In 1810 George and William established an importing house at 303 Branch street, making a specialty of tin plate. When they retired, their sons, Nathan and George conducted the business with the same integrity and energy that has always made the house of these honorable men so popular. Nathan and George are both dead ; they were deeply lamented by relatives and friends. Mr. William Taylor has recently retired. The firm now is Mr. Nathan Taylor, Mr. Hollingshead and George Taylor, Jr. They now occupy stores 301-303-305 Branch street, Philadelphia. Mr. Nathan Taylor, of the present firm, married Miss Florence N. Supplee. Their children are Elizabeth H. Taylor, Florence O. Taylor and Natalie Taylor. Mr. Hollingshead W. Taylor married Miss Evaline Skillman ; children are Aline Skillman Taylor and Hollingshead N. Taylor.

Tracy Taylor, grand-son of Andrew Tracy, was a man far above ordinary in intelligence and worth. He retired from the iron business, in which he was engaged for many years with his brothers George and William Taylor, in Philadelphia, and was an eminent jurist and a magistrate until his death in 1832. He married Miss Ann Henry, her father, John Henry, was a merchant in Philadelphia in the early days of that city. Her mother was Miss Knouse, sister to Jacob Knouse, a man highly respected. He left a large property that was distributed among his many descendants of Philadelphia and the Rising Sun, an adjoining place. The children of Ann and Tracy Taylor were :

Emily Ormond Taylor, married Mr. William Winberg, of Philadelphia, she died of consumption, childless; Albert Augustus, died young; Matilda Ormond Taylor married Harvey Birchard, of Milwaukee, who was an immediate descendant of John Birchard, one of the proprietors of Norwich, Conn. They have one son, Mr. Harvey L. Birchard, now twenty-eight years of age. Her second husband was Col. D. C. Abbey, now dead; Charles Hiram Taylor, second son of Ann and Tracy Taylor, was a physician graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, married Miss Mary Irick, daughter of Gen. Irick, of New Jersey. They had two children, Charles Tracy, and Mary, who died. Charles Tracy is a merchant in Philadelphia, married Miss Sophia Davis, grand-daughter of Mr. Cramp, the well known ship-builder of Philadelphia. Their children are Charles Keen Taylor, Harvey Birchard Taylor, Emily Cramp Taylor. Almira died unmarried; Alfred died, aged twenty-three, unmarried; DeWitt was a physician graduate at the Pennsylvania college, Philadelphia, and died of pneumonia; Tracy Watmough Taylor died in infancy,

Mr. William Taylor, brother to Tracy Taylor, married Miss Sarah Mollidor. Their only son, Nathan Taylor, was an energetic member of the firm of W. & G. Taylor, 303 Branch street, Philadelphia. He married Miss Charlot Cooper, of Philadelphia. Their sons were Nathan A. Taylor and Hollingshead Taylor.

George Taylor, brother to Nathan and Tracy Taylor, died in Philadelphia. He married Miss Augustine. Their children were: George E., married Miss Deal. George, his son, a member of the firm of N. and G. Taylor, of which his father was so long an honored and energetic member, is every way worthy of the high respect and confidence in which he is held. Maria, sister of George E., married Henry Elder; Cornelia married Granville Stokes; Julia is unmarried; William Y., married Miss McCullough, they have one daughter, Ella. Mr. John Taylor, brother to Tracy, George and Nathan Taylor, died in Philadelphia in 1876, unmarried, twin-sister to Tracy Taylor, they were the children of Nathan and Mary Taylor, and grand-children of Andrew Tracy. Capt. Israel Hollister died May 12, 1853, aged 97, his wife, Mary, died May 8, 1872, aged 85. Their children were: Mary Maria Hollister, born June 5, 1815; Francis Israel, born July 30, 1817; Eliza Ann, born Feb. 20, 1820; Sarah, born, Nov. 22, 1823; William Tracy, born April 6, 1825. The Hollister's have always made their home in Connecticut. Mr. William T. Hollister and his esteemable wife, who was a Miss Abbey, lived at East Hartford. They have a son, Charles, and daughter, Miss Hattie Hollister. Erastus Coit, born July 31, 1827; Cornelia Matilda, born March 31, 1831, are dead.

Capt. Israel Hollister, born Dec. 16, married Mary Taylor,

Mr. Henry L. Palmer, of Milwaukee, president of the life insurance company, resides at 302 Juneau Avenue. He is the grand-son of Jeremiah Tracy, son of Andrew Tracy, of Lisbon, Conn. Mr. Palmer is one of the most respected men of the Northwest, and a high mason, being Puisant Sovereign Supreme Council, A. A., S. R., N. M., J., U. S. A.; Past Grand Master Knight Templar, U. S.; Past Grand Commander; Past High Priest: Past Grand Master Ancient Order of Scottish Rite, Jurisdiction of the United States of America. Mr. Palmer's family consists of a wife, children and sisters, all highly respected.

COPIED FROM THE MILWAUKEE TELEGRAPH OF FEB. 19, 1888.

Two or three times a day if you are watching, you will see a certain gentleman going from his handsome new residence on Juneau Avenue, to the New Insurance Building, on Broadway. His step never varies, his head bends a little to the right and he stoops slightly when he walks. He looks like a man who thinks a great deal, and who is capable of thinking deeply, and his looks in this respect do not belie him. Do you want to know something about this gentleman, Judge Henry Palmer. About forty years ago he came to Milwaukee a young lawyer, and this city has been his home ever since. He has been a Judge, a member of Assembly, a State Senator, a candidate for Governor, several times Grand Master of the Masons, Grand High Priest of the Chapter, Grand Commander of the Knight Templar, head of the Wisconsin Consistory, and at the head of the 33^o Masons, in the Northern Jurisdiction of North America. If I mistake not, he participated in the organization of all the grand masonic lodges in this state. There are men in Milwaukee upon whom he has conferred all of the degrees as masons, from entered apprentice, to the 33^o. Without a doubt he has at his tongues end more of masonic ceremonies than any other living man. He takes an active part in conferring the degrees in the Wisconsin Consistory, every time there is a convocation. And the work of no man is more keenly appreciated by all the old members and those who are receiving grades. He is a ready, able and pleasant public speaker, has the confidence and respect of all classes, and a very warm place in the affections of the masons every where in North America. Mr. Palmer is president of the North Western Mutual Life Insurance Company of Milwaukee.

Nathan Taylor, first son of Mary Tracy and Nathan Taylor, married Miss Sarah Hackstaff, Sept. 13, 1810. He died in Troy, N. Y., June 2, 1835. She was born Oct. 13, 1793, died in New Ybrk, June 1, 1862. They were both highly respected. Their children were: Charles Taylor, born Nov. 11, 1811, who was drowned; Herman Taylor, born Dec. 2, 1813, died at Peru, N. Y., Nov. 19, 1814; Tracy Taylor, born in New York, Feb. 15, 1819, died at Troy in 1857. He was Teller of the Troy bank for many years; Sarah Ann, born at Peru, N. Y., June 2, 1821, died Feb., 1887, in New York City; Mary I. Taylor married William Rhodes, July 7, 1849; George H. Taylor, born June 23, married Josephine Hicock. He was lost on the Ville du Havre. She left New York on Nov. 15, 1873, with more than three hundred souls aboard. She came in collision in mid-ocean with the ship Loch Earn, bound from London to New York. Within twelve minutes after the collision the Ville du Havre sank, carrying down two hundred and twenty-six men, women and children; eighty-seven were saved; Alfred Taylor is married and has two children, and lives at Orange, N. Y. Mr. Nathan Taylor was a man very much respected and was connected with large lumber interests.

THE SUDELEY'S.

FROM BURKE'S PEERAGE OF 1886.

Sudeley, Baron, (Charles-Douglas-Richard-Hanbury-Tracy) of Toddington, county Gloucester, a lord in waiting to the Queen in 1880 to 1885, born July 3, 1840, married May 9, 1868, Ida-Maria-Catherine, daughter of the Hon. Frederick-James Tollamache, (brother of the Earl of Dysart) and has issue: first, Eva-Isabella-Henrietta, born Jan. 25, 1839; second, William-Charles, Frederick, born April 19, 1870; third, Algernon-Henry-Charles, born April 11, 1871; fourth, Florence-Emma-Louisa, born Feb. 11, 1873; fifth, Ida-Madeleine-Agnes, born Jan. 20, 1875; sixth, Alice-Evelyn-Agatha, born Aug. 12, 1877; seventh, Rhona-Margaret-Ida, born July 13, 1879; eighth, Felix-Charles-Hubert, born July 27, 1882. His lordship, who succeeded as fourth baron on the death of his brother, April 28, 1877, was formerly in the Royal Navy, which he entered in 1854, became lieutenant in 1830, and resigned his commission in 1863, having received medals for his services in the Baltic and China. He was subsequently called to the bar in January, 1856, and was M. P. for Montgomery from 1863 until his succession to the peerage.

The ancient family of Tracy boast of descent from Saxon Kings of England.

John de Sudeley, Lord of Sudeley and Toddington, A. D. 1140, married Grace, daughter and heir of Henry de Traci, feudal lord of Barnstable, and had issue. Ralph de Sudeley, founder of the priory of Erdburie; William, who adopted his mothers' name of De Traci.

The youngest son, William, assumed his mother's name of De Traci, lived in the reign of Henry II, and held lands of his brother Ralph de Sudley, by one knights fee, which was probably the manor of Toddington, for it appears by Doomesday book, that it was held by the Lord Sudeley, of the manor of Sudeley; and in the reign of Edward I, the Tracy's are expressly said to be possessed of it; and this William in a deed to Otwell, Lord of Sudeley, son and heir of the said Ralph, is called his uncle; this is, (almost beyond a doubt) the same Sir William Tracy, who was concerned in the assassination of Thomas A. Becket. Fuller, in his "Worthies," naming the assassin as Sir William Tracy, of Toddington, describes him as "a man of high birth, state and stomach, a favorite of the king's, and his daily attendants." In the 19th Henry II, he was created Steward of Normandy, which he held only two years; and he is again mentioned in 2 John. During the troublous reign of that monarch, William de Traci appeared in arms with the other barons, and had his lands confiscated; but they were restored to him by 2 Henry III, as is shown by a Roll, dated at Westwinster, Nov. 18, in that year. He also founded and endowed a chapel to Thomas A. Becket, in the conventual church at Tewksbury. He died aia, 1224. By Hawise de Born, his wife, (who married secondly, Hugh Fitzwilliam, Lord of Hatten, county Warwick) he left, with two daughters, the elder married to Sir Cervase Courtenay, and the younger to William de Arden; a son and successor.

Henry de Tracy, of Toddington, county Gloucester, who died about the year 1246, leaving a daughter, Margery, wife of Maurice de Stanlinch' and two sons, Henry, his heir, and Thomas, who became "jure uxoris Isoldas de Cardinan," of Restormel Castle, Coonwall, Henry de Tracy's eldest son.

Henry de Tracy, of Toddington, appears in a charter, July 26, 1260, and was summoned to perform military service at Carmarthen, 11 Edward I. He died aia, 1296, and was succeeded by his son,

Sir William Tracy, of Toddington, who is recorded among the knights of the same county, in the 17th Edward I, and with Ralph de Sudeley, his kinsman, is stated to have had a command in the Scottish war. He left a son and heir.

Sir William Tracy, of Toddington, who was in ward to Lawrence Tresham, 27 Edward I, at which time he is certified to hold £40 in lands. In the beginning of the reign of Edward II, he was at the tournament at Dunstable, as appears by an old drawing of a knight in armour, bearing a standard with the arms of the family. In the 17th of Edward II, he was, jointly with John Bermansel, high sheriff of Gloucestershire, which office in those times was of great authority. In a roll of the nobles of England, dated June 30, 1315, at Berwick, appear the names of this William Tracy, William de Sudeley, William le Boteler, of Wenun, etc. Sir William left a daughter, Margery, wife of John Archer, of Umbesslade, and a son and heir,

William Tracy, Esq., of Toddington, to whom, in conjunction with Thomas Berkeley, of Coberle, a mandate was issued, 7 Edward III, to raise three hundred men from the forest of Dene, and two hundred men from the county of Gloucester. His son and heir,

Sir John Tracy, of Toddington, knight of the shire of Gloucestershire, £2 Edward III, and sheriff for five years in succession, commencing in 1358, died in 1363, leaving, with a daughter, Margaret, wife of Sir Thomas de Langley, Knt., two sons, of whom the elder,

Sir John Tracy, of Toddington, M. P., and sheriff of Gloucestershire; died in 1379, leaving a daughter, Margaret, wife of Robert FitzElys, and a son and successor, William Tracy, Esq., of Toddington, high sheriff in 1395; died in 1399. His son and heir, William Tracy, Esq., of Toddington, was called to the privy council of Henry VI, as appears by private letters, still extant, written by the king in the most flattering terms, and dated July 21, 1401, "from my manor of Sutton." He was high sheriff 5 Henry V, and "one of those persons of quality in the county of Gloucester, who, bearing ancient arms from his ancestors, and holding by tenure, had summons in the 7 Henry V, to serve the king in person in defence of the realm." William Tracy, the privy councillor, married Alice, eldest daughter and co-heir of Sir Guy de la Spine, Knt., Lord of Coughton, county Warwick, and widow of William Gifford, (which Sir Guy de la Spine, was great grand-son of William de la Spine, by Joan, his wife, daughter and heir of Sir Simon Cocton, Knt.) and had issue, William his heir; John; Alice, who married Hugh Culme, Esq., of Moland, Devon. The elder son,

William Tracy, Esq., of Toddington, sheriff of Gloucestershire, 22 and 23 Henry VI, who married Margery, daughter of Sir John Pauncefort, Knt.; and died in 1460, leaving a daughter Margery, wife of Thomas Mylle, Esq., of Horscombe, county Salop, and two sons, Henry and Richard, the elder,

Henry Tracy, Esq., of Toddington, married Alice, daughter and co-heir of Thomas Baldington, Esq., of Alderly, county Oxon and died about 1506, leaving issue, two daughters, Anne married first, William Wye, second Thomas Mannington; Elizabeth, married first, Mr. Langley, second Sir Alexander Baynham; and three sons, viz: William, his heir; Richard, who married and had issue; and Ralph, a monk. The eldest son,

Sir William Tracy, of Toddington, was sheriff of Gloucestershire, in the 5 Henry VIII, anno, 1513. He was a gentleman of excellent parts and sound learning, and is memorable for being one of the first who embraced the reformed religion in England, as appears by his last will, dated 22 Henry VIII, which was condemned in the Bishop of London's Court after his decease, and an order sent to Parker, Chancellor of Worcester, to raise his body; but he too officiously burning the corpse, the recorder only warranting him to raise the body according to the law of the church, he was afterwards fined £400, and turned out of the chancellorship. Sir William's famous will is a curious document—most characteristic of the times. Sir William married Margaret, daughter of Sir Thomas Throckmorton of Corse Court, in Gloucestershire, and had issue: William, his heir; Richard, who obtained from his father the manor of Stanway, in the county of Gloucester, part of the lands of the Abbey of Tewksbury, which came to him by grant from the crown. "This Richard," says an old writer, "was well educated and wrote learnedly of his father's faith several treatises in the English tongue, and that most remarkable one, entitled "Preparations for the Cross," written experimentally, having suffered much in his estate for his fathers' reputed heretical will; he also wrote prophetically, of anno, 1550, (a few years before the beginning of Queen Mary) another treatise, "To Teach one to Die," which is annexed to his "Preparations for the Cross," which was printed, and falsely ascribed by the editor to be composed by John Frith, being one of the three that was found in the belly of a cod, brought into the market to be sold at Cambridge, A. D. 1626, wrapped about with canvass, very probably what that voracious fish plundered out of the pocket of some ship-wrecked seaman." In the 2nd of Elizabeth, he was sheriff of Gloucestershire, and having married Barbara, daughter of Thomas Lucy, Esq., of Charlecote, had three daughters and three sons, Paul, Nathaniel and Samuel. He was succeeded by the eldest,

Paul Tracy, Esq., of Stanway, in the county of Gloucester, high sheriff in the 20th of Elizabeth, who was created a baronet by King James I, June 29, 1611. Sir Paul married Anne, daughter of Ralph Shakerly, Esq., and had ten sons and as many daughters, of whom,

Richard, (Sir) the eldest, succeeded his father; Anne, married to Edward Hall, Esq., of the county of Worcester; Lucy, married to Ray Aylworth, Esq., of Aylworth, in the county of Gloucester; Alice: Hester, married to Francis, eldest son of John Kyrle, Esq., of Much Marcle, in Herefordshire; Elizabeth; Susan, married to William Price, Esq., of Winchester; Barbara; Margaret. He died about 1626, and was succeeded by his eldest son, Sir Richard Tracy, who had received the honor of knighthood in the life-time of his father, and was sheriff of Gloucester.

tershire, in the 4th of Queen Mary. He married Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Coningsly, of Hampton, in the county of Hereford, and had three sons, Humphrey, Richard and John. He died about the year 1637, and was succeeded by the eldest

Sir Humphrey Tracy, sheriff of Gloucestershire in the 15th of Charles I, who suffered severely for his loyalty during the rebellion, having had to pay to sequestrators £1600 for compensation for his estate. He died without issue, and was succeeded by his brother, in 1651,

Sir Richard Tracy, who likewise died, (sine prole) without issue, and was succeeded about 1666, by his only surviving brother,

Sir John Tracy, who died issueless in 1677, when the baronetcy expired. 3 Robert, died without issue, (sine prole.) 1 Margaret, married to Richard Dyneley, Esq., of Charleton, county of Worcester. 2 Alice, married to ——— Wogan, Esq. The eldest son,

William Tracy, Esq., of Toddington, married Agnes, daughter of Sir Simon Digby, of Coleshill, county Warwick, and had (with two daughters, Margery, married to John Stratford, Esq., and Margaret, married to John Washbourne, Esq., of Wychynford) a son and successor,

Henry Tracy, Esq., of Toddington, who married Elizabeth, daughter of John Bruges, first Lord Chandos, of Sudeley, and died in 1557, (will dated Feb. 5, 1556, and proved in 1557) left issue: John, his heir; Giles, married Katherine Pickhurst, and had issue; Edward; Francis; Nicholas; Eleanor, married to Anthony Kingston, Esq. The eldest son,

Sir John Tracy, of Toddington, sheriff of and M. P. for Gloucestershire, was knighted by Queen Elizabeth in 1574. He married Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Throckmorton, of Corse Court, and by her, (who died May 21, 1551) had, with other issue: John, (Sir) his heir; William, who married Mary, daughter of Sir John Conway, Knt. of Arrow; Thomas, (Sir) grand usher to the Queen, died without issue, (sine prole;) Mary, married first,

William Hoby, Esq., second, Horatio, Lord Vere, of Toddington, the famous general. Sir John died in 1591, and was succeeded by his son,

Sir John Tracy, of Toddington, who received knighthood from King James I, in 1609, and was advanced by letters-patent, dated Jan. 12, 1642, to the peerage of Ireland, as (Baron and Viscount Tracy, of Rathcoole.) He married Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Shirley, Knt. of Isfield, county Sussex, and was succeeded at his decease, by his son, Robert Tracy, 2nd Viscount Tracy, was knighted by King Charles I, and sat in parliament as member for Gloucestershire. His lordship married first, Bridget, daughter of John Lyttleton, Esq., of Frankley Court, county Worcester, by Meriel, his wife, daughter of Sir Thomas Bromley, Lord Chancellor, and by her, (who died in 1632) had issue :

Anne, who married William Somerville, Esq., of Edston, county Warwick, and was grand-mother of the author of "The Chase," and other poems ; Meriel, married Sir William Poole, of Saperton ; Frances, married Dr. Hinckley ; Mary, died unmarried. His lordship married secondly, Dorothy, daughter of Thomas Cocks, Esq., of Castleditch, county Hereford, and had by her,

FAMILY OF HANBURY.

This family and that of Lord Bateman, derive from the same source, viz: the ancient house of Hanbury, of Hanbury, an old Worcestershire stock, which had been there seated, from a very remote period.

Henry de Hanbury, son of Geoffrey de Hanbury, of Hanbury, and grand-son of Geoffrey de Hanbury, living at Hanbury, temp. John was lord chief justice of the common pleas, in Ireland, temp. Edward II, and died about the year 1353. His son and heir,

Reginald de Hanbury, M. P. for Worcestershire, 27 Edward III, was father of

Roger de Hanbury, M. P. for Worcestershire, living at Hanbury, temp. Richard II, whose son and successor, John de Hanbury, of Hanbury, A. D. 1430, married and had issue:

William, of Hanbury Hall, father, by Margery, his wife, of John Hanbury, Esq., of Hanbury Hall, county Worcester, ancestor of the Hanbury's of that place; John, of Beanhall, manor of Fakenham, county Worcester, whose son, Edward Hanbury, Esq., of Beanhall, was ancestor of the Hanbury's of Kilmarnish, whose heir male and representative, is Lord Bateman; Richard, of whose descendants we treat. The third son,

Richard Hanbury, Esq., married, and was father of

Richard Hanbury, Esq., who married, first, Catherine Smyth and secondly, Margery Tynter; by the former he was father of

Richard Hanbury, Esq., of Elmley Lovett, county Worcester, whose wife was a daughter of Basset, and whose son and heir,

John Hanbury, Esq., was of Elmly Lovett. He married twice, and by his second wife, a daughter of Bradley, was the father of

Richard Hanbury, Esq., of Elmley Lovett, who married Margery, daughter of Francis Bradley, Esq., and left a son and heir,

John Hanbury, Esq., of Fakenham, county Worcester, M. P. for the city of Gloucester in 1626, was a staunch parliamentarian, high in the confidence of Oliver Cromwell, by whom he was appointed sheriff of Worcester in 1649-50. He married Anne daughter of Christopher Capel, Esq., of Capel House, in Herefordshire, Alderman and M. P. for Gloucester; and died in 1659, left several children, of whom the youngest son, Capel Hanbury, Esq., of Gloucester and of Whorestine, in Worcestershire, died in 1707, leaving by his first wife, (with a daughter Mary, wife of Mr. Sergeant John Hoo) a son and successor,

John Hanbury, Esq., of Pontypool Park, in Monmouthshire, M. P. for that county, and a major in the army; who married in July, 1703, Bridget, eldest daughter and co-heir of Sir Edward Ayscough, of Stallinborough, county Lincoln, and died June 13, 1734, leaving, (with other children, who died without issue,)

Capel, of whom presently: Charles (Sir) K. B. of Coldbrook Park, county Monmouth, born Dec. 8, 1709, M. P. for Monmouth, married in July, 1732, Frances, second daughter and co-heir of Thomas, Earl of Coningsly, and had two daughters, his co-heirs: Frances, married in 1754, to William, fourth Earl of Essex; Charlotte, married in 1750, to Hon. Robert Boyle. Sir Charles, who assumed the surname of Williams, died Nov. 17, 1759; George, of Coldbrook, born Sept. 23, 1715, who assumed the surname of Williams, at the decease of his brother, Sir Charles Hanbury-Williams. He married Margaret, daughter of John Chambre, Esq., of Llanfoist, county Monmouth, and died Dec. 11, 1764, leaving issue: Thomas, died in 1778, leaving issue. The eldest son, (to leave issue,)

Capel Hanbury, Esq., of Pontypool Park, M. P. for Monmouthshire, born Dec. 9, 1707, married Oct. 7, 1743, Jane, who died Aug. 13, 1744, daughter of Thomas Charles, fifth viscount Tracy, and died Dec. 7, 1765, left, with two daughters, Henrietta and Frances, (who both died unmarried) one son,

John Hanbury, Esq., of Pontypool Park, M. P. for the county Monmouth, born Aug. 1774, who married Jane, daughter of Morgan Lewis, Esq., of St. Pierre, in that shire, and by her, (who married secondly, Thomas Stoughton, Esq., of Ballyhorgan, county Kerry) had issue :

John Capel, born Jan. 27, 1775, died unmarried, aged 21, Dec. 1790; Capel, of Pontypool Park, Lord Lieutenant, county Monmouth, born Oct. 6, 1776, who assumed in 1797, the surname and arms of Leigh. He married first, April, 1797, Molly Anne, only daughter of Nathaniel Meyers, Esq., of Neath, Glamorganshire, and relict of Sir R. H. Mackworth, Bart., which lady died without issue, June 27, 1845. Mr. Hanbury-Leigh married secondly, Aug. 20, 1847, Emma Elizabeth, fourth daughter of Thomas Bates-Rous, Esq., of Courtyrala, county Glamorgan, and died Sept. 28, 1851, leaving issue by her; John Capel Hanbury, Esq., of Pontypool, born May 14, 1853, married Jan. 8, 1885, Louisa Charlotte, daughter of Col. Edward Eager; Emma and Frances Elizabeth, married Dec. 12, 1868, the Hon. A. L. G. Ashley, and died Aug. 2, 1875; Charles, first Lord Sudeley. Mr. Hanbury died April 4, 1784. His third son, Hubbard, a farmer at Hatfield; Harriet Maria, born Sept. 21, 1825, married in 1849, David F. Wells, of Hartford, and in 1858, had one daughter.

Dr. Philemon Tracy, born at Norwich, Conn., May 30, 1757, second son of Dr. Elisha Tracy, of Norwich, by his second wife, Elizabeth Dorr, was a great grand-son of Margaret Post of the third generation. He married in 1785, Abigail Trott, and settled at Norwich, where he was a very distinguished physician, and received the honorary degree of doctor of medicine at Yale in 1817. He practiced medicine in his native town more than fifty-five years. He excelled in the investigation of chronic diseases, especially those which from their complication, demanded deep research and accurate discrimination. Mrs. Sigourney says: "His habit was minutely to investigate every symptom before prescribing; to require strict obedience to his prescriptions; to regulate diet and regimen, and to give as little medicine as possible." He died in 1837, at Norwich, aged 80 years, having become blind some time before his death. Their children were:

Phineas Lyman, born Dec. 25, 1786, at Norwich, graduated at Yale in 1806, and was a lawyer, married Harriet Lay, settled at Batavia, N. Y., where he was a member of Congress, and where he was living in 1859, s. p.

Edward Dorr, born March 21, 1794, at Norwich, married Susan Campbell, and was a lawyer. They settled at Macon, Ga. He was a judge of the superior court. She died September, 1834. He then married Aug. 2, 1835, Caroline Campbell, and died at Macon. He had six children; Anne, Philemon, Edward, Matilda, Campbell, Harriet Charlotte.

Richard Proctor, born March 21, 1791, at Norwich, (twin.) He was a physician, and occupied his father's homestead at Norwich, where he was living in 1860, unmarried. He graduated in 1816 at the medical department of Yale college.

Albert Haller, born June 17, 1793, at Norwich, was a lawyer, and settled at Buffalo, where he was elected to congress at the early age of 24, but attained the constitutional age before congress convened in December, 1819, and he was elected to the two next congresses. During his six years services in congress he was much respected by all parties, and finally succeeded in carrying through a bill for the relief of his constituents upon the Niagara frontier for the destruction of their property by the enemy in the war of 1812. He subsequently served eight years in the state senate, where he rendered very valuable services to the state, particularly as a member of the court of dernier resort. He subsequently retired from public life, and devoted his time to his private affairs and became a very wealthy man. He married Nov. 23, 1825, Harriet Foote Norton, daughter of Ebenezer Foote Norton, Esq., and Abigail Kibbe, of Canandaigua, afterwards of Buffalo, and grand-daughter of Aaron Norton and Martha Foote, of Goshen, Conn. The following is an abstract of an obituary notice of him in a Buffalo paper: "We have left for ourselves but little space in which to describe Mr. Tracy's intellectual and moral characteristics. He has of late years been chiefly distinguished among us by his extraordinary conversational talents.

He was one of the few American who cultivated this beautiful and difficult art. His mastery of it was complete, and won the admiration of all who were admitted to his society; distinguishing him while yet a youth in the circles of society in Washington. Every subject, whether gay or severe, seemed equally agreeable to him, and was treated with a wealth of diction, a felicity of expression, and a justness of thought, which can seldom be surpassed. His mind was both analytical and discursive; skeptical, yet eminently open to conviction. Always ready to abandon old opinions when he discovered that they were false, he stubbornly resisted every opinion, however venerable or common, which could not stand the tests of reason. In his youth, without instruction, he acquired sufficient knowledge of Latin to read the best known Roman authors. He had also some acquaintance with French, and was familiar with most of the philosophic and a few of the lighter writers of that language. These acquisitions he greatly prized, and was accustomed to say that they were an invaluable treasure to him. His knowledge of English literature, judged from any point, must be said to have been very extensive. He was an industrious and unprejudiced reader of the new as well as the old. He did not commit the folly of stolidly rejecting romance but found constant pleasure in the pages of Fielding, Dickens, Thackeray and Bulwer. He sought eagerly for the latest publications, and was an admirer of Macaulay, Tennyson, Ruskin, Longfellow and Carlyle. A lack of imagination measurably impaired his judgment upon belles-lettres, but notwithstanding this defect, his criticisms were highly valued and eagerly sought after by some of the most distinguished and successful of our own writers. It was in political and metaphysical science that his mind found its most congenial nutriment. Upon these subjects he had read much and thought more. No one who knew him and observed his keen instinct after truth, his quickness in perceiving error, the agility and subtlety of his intellect, and his judicial skepticism and fairness, can doubt that he might easily have taken high rank as a political or metaphysical writer." "Mr. Tracy's moral character was equally worthy of admiration. He has dwelt among us for more than forty years, but has done no act of which he or we need to feel ashamed. Simple in his tastes, frugal in expenditure, generous in hospitality, free to the approach of the humble, ever at hand to console or sustain the unfortunate and the distressed, ever ready to rebuke the adventurous and oversanguine ; to his debtors most lenient, to his creditors paying every demand ; the guide of the young, the counselor of the widowed and the orphan ; an honorable foe, a faithful friend, scrupulous in the performance of every public and every private duty ; he has exhibited to us for our emulation a noble example of a good citizen, wise statesman, a republican gentleman, and a kind and most liberal man." Albert H. Tracy died Sept. 12, 1859, at Buffalo, where his widow was living in 1863. They had two children : Albert Haller, born Oct. 29, 1834, graduated at Yale in 1854, was a lawyer, living at Buffalo in 1863, unmarried ; Francis Walsingham, born June 9, 1839, married Sept. 25, 1862, Mary Robinson, daughter of Alan-son Robinson and Zillah Townsend.

Francis, born April 13, 1797, at Norwich, and died April 23, 1802.

Harriet Frances, born Sept. 1788, at Norwich. She was the early friend of Mrs. Sigourney, whose gifted pen has done justice to her memory. She died April 25, 1830, at Norwich, unmarried.

Col. Elisha Tracy, born at Norwich, Conn., May 27, 1766, third son of Dr. Elisha Tracy, of Norwich, by his second wife, Elizabeth Dorr, was a great grand-son of Margaret Post, of the third generation. He married Oct. 31, 1796, Lucy Coit Huntington, born March 15, 1778, at Norwich, only daughter of Judge Andrew Huntington, of Norwich, by his second wife, Mrs. Hannah Phelps, of Stonington, and grand-daughter of Major Gen. Jabez Huntington and Elizabeth Backus, his first wife. [This Major Gen. Jabez Huntington, born Aug. 7, 1719, graduated at Yale in 1741, married first, Elizabeth Backus, who died in 1745, second, Hannah Williams, daughter of Rev. Ebenezer Williams and Penelope Chester, of Pomfret; son of Joshua Huntington and Hannah Perkins, and grand-son of Deacon Simon Huntington, the second, and Lydia Gager, of Norwich.] Col. Elisha Tracy was a lawyer, and they settled at Norwich, where he was frequently a member of the legislature, and a very successful lawyer, and was also a justice of the peace and a colonel of militia. He died March 10, 1842, at Norwich, where she died May 9, 1846. Their children were: William Swan, born Feb. 4, 1799, at Norwich, married Sept. 18, 1833, Mary G. Rogers, settled at Painesville, O., had three children: Elisha, a lawyer at New York in 1859; William Rogers; Mary.

Winslow, born Jan. 13, 1801, at Norwich, died May 11, 1823, unmarried. Elisha Dorr, born June 4, 1810, at Norwich, died June 12, 1823. Stephen Decatur, born July 14, 1812, at Norwich, drowned June 25, 1817. Elisha Winslow, born April 8, 1823, at Norwich, graduated at Harvard in 1843, was a lawyer, living at Chicago in 1858. Elizabeth Dorr, born July 22, 1803, at Norwich, married Oct. 29, 1829, Erastus Williams, settled at Norwich, where she died in 1855. Lucy Huntington, born May 11, 1806, at Norwich, married Sept. 11, 1833, Albert Smith, of Norwich. Hannah Phelps, born April 13, 1808, at Norwich, died May 10, 1810. Mary Griswold, born May 1, 1816, at Norwich, died Sept. 15, 1835, unmarried. Charlotte Isabella, born Sept. 30, 1819, at Norwich, married May 17, 1841, Giles M. Eaton, who died, she was living at Norwich in 1860.

Irene Burnham, born at Norwich, Conn., Nov. 18, 1744, eldest daughter of Daniel Burnham and Irene Tracy, was a great grand-daughter of Margaret Post, of the third generation. She married Nov. 2, 1763, Aaron Bushnell, born June 16, 1743, at Norwich, third son of Nathan Bushnell and Margery Jackson, of Norwich; grand-son of Nathan Bushnell and Anne Carey, of Norwich. [This Nathan Bushnell, born Feb. 12, 1686, at Norwich, married first, Dec. 2, 1713, Anne Carey, second, Sept. 12, 1715, Mehetable Allyn: youngest son of Joseph Bushnell and Mary Leffingwell, of Norwich. That Joseph Bushnell, born May, 1651, at Saybrook, married Nov. 28, 1673, Mary Leffingwell, the eldest son of Richard Bushnell and Mary Marvin, of Saybrook. His wife, Mary Leffingwell, born Dec. 10, 1654, at Saybrook, youngest daughter of Lieut. Thomas Leffingwell, one of the original proprietors of Norwich, and Mary, his wife.] Aaron Bushnell and wife settled at Norwich, where they had six children recorded to them: Asa, born July 27, 1764, at Norwich; Joshua, born Dec. 7, 1766, at Norwich, died Jan. 13, 1767; second Joshua, born Feb. 27, 1775, at Norwich; Abigail, born Nov. 24, 1767, at Norwich; Margery, born Aug. 18, 1770, at Norwich; Mary, born Dec. 11, 1772, at Norwich.

Thomas Huntington, born at Norwich, Conn., Oct. 28, 1757, second son of Christopher Huntington and Sarah Bingham, of Norwich, was a great grand-son of Margaret Post, of the third generation. He married Oct. 14, 1779, Abigail Backus, born Nov. 6, 1761, at Norwich, youngest daughter of Ebenezer Backus, Esq., by his third wife, Sarah Clark. She died March 6, 1781, s. p. He then married —— Griswold, and settled at Bozrah, and removed to Middletown, Vt., and removed to Dresden, N. Y., about 1820. He was a justice of the peace and deacon of the Baptist church at Middletown. His children by her were: Backus, born at Bozrah; John, born at Bozrah; Erastus, born at Bozrah; Noel, born at Middletown, Vt.; Abigail, born at Bozrah; Minerva, born at Bozrah.

APPENDIX.

The Hyde genealogy, from which the greater part of my book is copied, published by Chancellor Reuben H. Walworth, is a work of great value in the line of family history; embodying a vast amount of pedigree, and displaying clearness of perception and skill in arrangement as well as unwearied perseverance and accuracy in research. It forms a grand memorial record of paternity and lineage, spreading far and wide, but taking the nine miles square of Norwich as the center from which it radiates. Such a work is a monument to perpetuate the name of the author, Reuben H. Walworth, L. L. D., more lasting than statues of marble or pillars of granite. (Extract from Miss Calkin's work on Norwich, Conn.)

HOME OF THE TRACY'S.

The home of the Tracy's in England is Tewksbury, a borough of England, situated ten miles north-east of Gloucester, on the Avon, at its junction with the Severn, and connected with the Birmingham and Gloucestershire railway by a branch three miles in length. It has a magnificent (Abbey) church, town-hall and many public buildings. Market houses, various chapels, penitentiary, jail, literary and scientific mechanic institutes, grammar school, alms-houses, and very many charitable institutions. It has many manufactories, especially of bobinet lace, stockings, leather, nails, etc. It returns two members to the house of commons. The great battle of Tewksbury was fought immediately south of the town, from this was called "Bloody Meadow." Tewksbury is pronounced Tuksbury.

URIAH TRACY.

Uriah Tracy, of Litchfield, born at Norwich in 1755, was United States Senator from 1796 until his death. He died in Washington, July 19, 1807, and was a descendant of Winslow Tracy, the youngest son of the first John, who was Lieut. Thomas Tracy's first son, and was the first person buried in the Congressional cemetery. He was a very brilliant man, celebrated for his wit and humor.

DR. ELISHA TRACY.

Dr. Elisha Tracy graduated at Yale college in 1738, and studied for his profession with the senior Dr. Rogers. He was eminently skillful in medicine and surgery and one of the earliest advocates of inoculation as a preventive of the small-pox. He died May 1, 1783, aged 71.

PHILEMON TRACY.

Philemon Tracy, son of Dr. Elisha Tracy, was 55 years in the practice of medicine. He was able and faithful in his vocation and respected in the community. He was distinguished for his skill in the treatment of chronic diseases, discriminating, thorough and attentive in all his professional duties. He died April 26, 1837, aged 80.

FREDERICK PALMER TRACY.

Frederick Palmer Tracy made a careful examination of the records of Gloucestershire, when in England, which proved the royal descent of Thomas Tracy, of Norwich, Conn. Frederick Palmer Tracy, of Lowville, Lewis county, N. Y., died Oct. 10, aged 45. He was the son of Cyrus and Hannah Tracy, and was born at Windham, Conn., Feb. 22, 1815. He was of the seventh generation from Thomas Tracy, the first, the ancestor of all the Tracy's of Connecticut. Frederick Palmer Tracy in 1832, when a little more than 17 years of age, joined the Methodist Episcopal church, of Bozrah, Conn., and soon began to preach. In 1833, he was received on probation in the New England Conference of that denomination, and appointed to Lyme, Conn., and in 1834, to Hebron, Conn. In 1835, he was ordained a deacon and appointed to Southbridge, Mass., and in 1836, to South Boston. In 1837 he was ordained an elder, being then the youngest man known in New England to have attained that position, and was stationed at Newberg, Mass., and in 1838 at South Lyme. While at the latter place he proposed to emigrate to Oregon, and published for about a year, a monthly periodical, devoted to the extension of the idea of emigration to that almost unknown country. In 1839 he energetically pursued his favorite idea, but the plan failing, he removed in 1840, to Concord, N. H., and established a paper called "The People's Advocate." In 1842 he removed to Cambridgeport, Mass., and in 1844 to Williamsburg, Mass., where he had charge of the Methodist Episcopal church until May, 1846, when his health and voice failing he was obliged to abandon the pulpit. He visited Europe that year for the benefit of his health, returning in 1848. The succeeding summer and autumn he edited the "Cuyaga New Era," published at Auburn, N. Y., and in the spring of 1849, removed to California. He was admitted to the bar in 1851, and commenced the practice of the law in San Francisco, and was very successful. At one time he held the office of county attorney for civil business for San Francisco. He was a delegate to Chicago to the republican convention in 1860, and remained in the Atlantic States delivering political addresses in support of the nominees of the convention till his death. His remains were brought to Lyme, Conn., and his funeral took place Oct. 15, from the church where he had been a distinguished pastor. His father had died at that place a few weeks previous. Frederick Palmer Tracy left a widow and several children, when last heard from were at San Francisco. He was a man of fine parts, a clear, strong logical thinker, and an eloquent and effective speaker. While at Williamsburg he was appointed a resident member of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society, and after he removed to California he became corresponding member.

MRS. MATILDA ORMOND ABBEY.

Mrs. Matilda Ormond Abbey, the compiler of this book, was born in Philadelphia, daughter of Tracy Taylor, of that city, and grand-daughter of Mary Tracy, of Norwich, Conn. She was married in her native city by Rev. Benjamin Griffiths to Harvey Birchard, of Milwaukee, to which city she removed. She has one son, Harvey L. Birchard, now 28 years old. After Mr. Birchard's death, she married Col. D. C. Abbey. The Tracy's, Hyde's and Birchard's have so intermarried they seem like one family. The immediate ancestors of Harvey Birchard, of Milwaukee, lived at Wilton, then moved to Ridgeburg, Conn. His grand-father was Lieut. Isaiah Birchard, who married Sarah Betts in 1757. Harvey Birchard's brothers and sisters were: Eleia, married Mary Demming; Pheobe, married John Foster; Mirilda, married Eliazer Taylor; Lyman, died aged 22 years; Anise, married Harvey De Forrest; Stephen, married Betsey Gray; Alanson, married Esther Rockwell. Mr. Francis Birchard, nephew of Harvey Birchard, is the son of Alanson Birchard, has lived in Milwaukee many years. Elizabeth, married Charles De Forrest. Jeremiah Birchard's brother was a very rich and eccentric man, and died a bachelor. Harvey Birchard's mother was Elizabeth Abbot, she was a beautiful woman and of noble character.

BENJAMIN F. TRACY.

The State of New York has the honor of being the birth-place and home of many of the Tracys. The following was kindly sent me by Mr. Kelby, librarian of the Historical Society of New York, (regarding the family of the Hon. Gen. Benjamin F. Tracy, our present Secretary of the Navy.) Copied from the Historical Gazetteer of Tioga county, N. Y., town of Owego. Thomas Tracy came to this vicinity with his wife and infant son, Benjamin Tracy, and settled near the mouth of Tracy creek, Broome county, in 1790. This creek receives its name from Mr. Tracy. In 1801 he removed with his family to the Holland Purchase near Buffalo. His son, Benjamin, several years afterwards returned and settled on the Apalachin creek where he raised a large family of children, one of whom is Gen. Benjamin F. Tracy, born at Owego, April 26, 1830, now a resident of Brooklyn, N. Y. Benjamin Tracy, the son of Thomas and father of our Secretary of the Navy, was born in 1795 and died in 1883. See Benjamin F. Tracy is distinguished not only for his eminent career as a lawyer but as a learned, impartial and laborious judge, and acute independent minded legislator who follows the leadership of his own judgment, subordinated to partisan interest only so far as it enhances the interests of all his constituency; a determined enemy to all political quackery. He is also distinguished as a soldier, inspired by a self-sacrificing patriotism. As a fearless able prosecuting officer of government who discharged difficult and responsible duties with clean hands and honest heart in times when speculations and stupendous frauds were nearly overwhelming it, when strong defiant rings and unscrupulous juntas were by the unstinted use of money corrupting the very sources of justice. Benjamin F. Tracy was born at Owego, N. Y., April 26, 1830. His father, Benjamin Tracy, was one of the oldest and most highly respected residents not only of Owego but of the county of Tioga. A pioneer of the southern tier, one of that band most of whom are now banished from earth whose virtue, integrity, enterprise and industry made the desert bloom and laid the foundation for wealth and culture of that beautiful region. The secret of Benjamin F. Tracy's success and his control of the popular mind may be found in his sincerity, constancy and directness. There is no deceit in his nature, men are never left in doubt about his views, and what is better he is never in doubt about himself. One always knows where to find him. His sympathy is always with the masses. No man better understands the impulses of the people than he, and he has an intense sense of justice between man and man, estimating men according to their worth. He never stands an assumed dignity nor by word or manner indicating any assumed personal superiority in his official positions. His policy was never timid or vacillating; whatever the responsibility he never hesitated to assume it but always moved promptly to the front. Perhaps nowhere in his whole career were these features more conspicuously exhibited than when discharging the duties of United States District Attorney for the eastern district of New York. In the spring of 1862 still remembered as a period of alarm to the friends of the Union cause, new levies were imperative for the Federal army, and Gov. Morgan at once appointed a committee in each senatorial district to organize a general recruiting effort. Tracy was one of the committee for Broome, Tioga and Tomkins counties. He accepted the charge and in addition to general service as a member, he received a commission from the governor, and personally recruited two regiments, the 109th and the 137th, making his headquarters at Binghamton. The active work was completed in 30 days, and Tracy was appointed colonel of the 109th with which he reported to Gen. Wool at Baltimore, in whose department it remained until transferred to that of Washington. In the spring of 1864 the regiment was ordered to join the 9th (Burnside) corps, then a part of Grant's advance. Col. Tracy led his regiment with great gallantry in the battle of the Wilderness when its loss on Friday, May 6, was upward of eighty killed and wounded. Near the close of the fighting on that day he fell exhausted and was carried from the field, urged by the staff of his commanding officer to go to the hospital. He refused, but resumed the lead of his regiment and held it through three days of the hard fighting at Spottsylvania where he completely broke down and was compelled to surrender the command to the Lieut. Colonel. When he became satisfied that months must elapse before he could again join the army, and not liking military service in a hospital he tendered his resignation and came north to recruit his health. In the following September without solicitation on his part Sec. Stanton tendered him the appointment of colonel of 127 United States colored troops which he accepted ; subsequently was ordered to the command of the military post at Elmira, including the prison camp and the draft rendezvous for Western New York. This was a large and important command in the prison camp. There were at this time 10,000 prisoners. In his domestic relations Sec. Tracy is fortunate and happy. In 1850 he was united by marriage to Miss Delinda E. Catlin, a sister of Gen. Isaac S. Catlin, Ex-District Attorney of the county of Kings and one of the ablest members of the bar. Judge Tracy has three children—two daughters and a son. After retiring from the bench in 1882 as he could not resist his love for the profession he decided to resume it again. Accordingly he formed a co-partnership with William C. Dewitt, Esq., and his son, F. B. Tracy, and opened an office in Brooklyn. This was an advantageous and fortunate business relation, combining a strength, a variety of talent, learning and influence which gives it high rank in the profession, and is justly appreciated at home and abroad. Unfortunately for Judge Tracy his devotion to his judicial labors and duties impaired his health to such an extent that he was incapacitated for business, but a total abnegation from business, judicious medical treatment and a tour to Europe has nearly restored his health, and he is once more in the discharge of those duties his noble nature loves so well, and by which he has gained the high honors he so well merits and enjoys.

THE BIRCHARD'S.

Thomas Birchard, aged 40, embarked for New England in a vessel called the "True Love," Sept. 20, 1635, with his wife, Mary, and six children, one of them a son, named John, aged seven years, the others were daughters. He is subsequently found at Saybrook, and was deputy from that township to the general court in 1650-51. After that there seems no record except an account of a very extensive land sale in 1656, to William Pratt, of Martha's Vineyard, wherein he quits claim for himself in behalf of his son, John Birchard. It has been proved that this son John was one of the ten inhabitants of Norwich, Conn., accepted as freeman, and was deputy to the general court in Oct., 1691. The marriage of John Birchard and Christian Andrews, July 22, 1653, and ranging from 1654 to 1680, the birth of 14 children is recorded in Norwich, Conn. The first five children and one of later birth died in infancy. The mother was called away while her family were still young. Mr. Birchard married for his second wife, Jane, widow of Samuel Hyde, and daughter of Thomas Lee. In the settlement of Lebanon, Mr. Birchard took a prominent interest. He was one of the four original proprietors of the nine-mile tract, Norwich, purchased from the Indian chief Owaneco, in 1692. He assisted in the expense of laying out the lands and moving thither with his family in 1698, and died Nov. 17, 1702. His wife, Mrs. Jane Birchard, died at Lebanon, Jan. 21, 1723. Mr. Birchard had six sons that lived to maturity. These sons all left families. The two daughters of John Birchard, of the nine-mile tract, married John Caulkins and Jonathan Hartshorn.

Ezra Birchard, born at Norwich, Conn, Sept. 11, 1731, eldest son of John Birchard and Jane Hyde, of Norwich, was a grand-son of Thomas Hyde, of the third generation. He married Oct. 17, 1756, Martha Barret. They settled at Norwich, where they had six children recorded to them: Andrew, born April 22, 1759, at Norwich, died at Norwich, Feb. 16, 1767; Asahel, born June 14, 1762, at Norwich, married Jan. 1, 1788, Elizabeth Fox, at Bozrah, and settled at Lima, N. Y.; Ezra, born Aug. 9, 1766, at Norwich; second Andrew, born Dec. 2, 1768, at Norwich; Eli, born Aug. 7, 1772, at Norwich; Eunice, born Dec. 6, 1774, at Norwich.

John Birchard, born at Norwich, Conn., Sept. 30, 1733, second son of John Birchard and Jane Hyde, of Norwich, was a grand-son of Thomas Hyde, of the third generation. He married July 5, 1759, Anne Barker, and settled at Norwich, where they had three children recorded to them : Jonathan, born Nov. 11, 1763, at Norwich ; Jabez, born May 16, 1765, at Norwich, married Jan. 31, 1799, Mary Downer, at Bozrah : Anne, born Dec. 4, 1761, at Norwich.

Gideon Birchard, born at Norwich, May 23, 1735, third son of John Birchard and Jane Hyde of Norwich, was a grand-son of Thomas Hyde, of the third generation. He married April 13, 1757, Eunice Abel, born March 1, 1737, second daughter of Capt. Joseph Abel, of Norwich, Conn., by his first wife, Jerusha Frink. They settled at Norwich. He died at Utica, N. Y. Their children were : Elisha, born June 14, 1758, at Norwich ; Roger, born May 5, 1762, at Norwich, died Oct. 15, 1782 ; Jedediah, born Aug. 17, 1765, at Norwich ; Gurdon, born Dec. 29, 1767, at Norwich ; Erastus, born April 7, 1769 ; Eunice, born April 27, 1780, married her father's second cousin, Thomas Langrel Thomas, second son of Ebenezer Thomas and Deborah Hyde, of Norwich, Conn.

Phineas Birchard, born at Norwich, Conn., Sept. 26, 1738, fourth son of John Birchard and Jane Hyde, of Norwich, was a grand-son of Thomas Hyde, of the third generation. He married June 14, 1764, Lydia Farnham, and settled at Norwich, where they had one child recorded to them : Amasa, born Jan. 19, 1765, at Norwich.

Lois Birchard, born at Norwich, Conn., Nov. 15, 1744, fourth daughter of John Birchard and Jane Hyde, of Norwich, was a grand-daughter of Thomas Hyde, of the third generation. She married May 23, 1767, Joseph Chapman, born Sept. 8, 1729, son of Joseph Chapman and Elizabeth Ames. They settled at Norwich, where she died March, 1769. His child by her was : Joseph, born Oct. 13, 1768, at Norwich. He then married in 1769, Elizabeth Abel, born Dec. 5, 1749, third daughter of Capt. Joshua Abel, by his second wife, Anna Backus.

Of the many illustrious persons who are connected with the Birchard family, one of the most noted is the Hon. Rutherford

Hayes, Ex-President of the United States. The Hayes' family can boast of a long line of honorable ancestors, which can be traced back as far as 1280, when the Hayes' and Rutherford's were two scottish chieftains, fighting side by side with Baliol, William Wallace and Robert Bruce. Both families were numbered among the nobility, owning extensive estates and having a large number of followers. The first who came to America was George Hayes, he left Scotland in 1680. He made his home in Connecticut, all that can be learned of him is that he settled in Windsor, Conn. He had one son, named George, who remained in Windsor during his life. Daniel Hayes, the son of the latter, married Sarah Lee, he lived after his marriage and until his death, at Sinisbury, Conn. Ezekiel Hayes, son of Daniel, born in 1724, was extensively engaged in manufacturing iron, especially scythes, at Bradford, Conn. Rutherford Hayes, son of Ezekiel, and grand-father of Gen. Hayes, was born at New Haven, Aug 1756. During his life-time Vermont was the eldorado of New England, and a large number of people from Connecticut, emigrated to that state, including Rutherford Hayes, who purchased a farm and established a hotel at Brattleboro'. It was at Brattleboro', the father of Gen. Hayes was born. He married Sept, 1813, Sophia Birchard, of Wilmington, Vt., whose family also emigrated from Connecticut, they having been among the wealthiest and best families of Norwich, Conn. Her ancestry by the male side can be followed in an unbroken line back to 1635, when John Birchard came to Norwich, and became one of the original proprietors of that place. Both of her grand-fathers were valient soldiers of the revolution. The father of Gen. Hayes was one of those interesting characters whose life illustrates the perseverance and varied talents of our early New England people. He was a leader among his young companions in all their plays and games. He established a store at Brattleboro'. In this mercantile occupation, which he conducted on the strictest principal of honesty, he made a large number of acquaintances, who invariably became warm friends. He was a sincere christian and was a liberal and active member of his church. It was at church that he met Sophia Birchard. Too much can not be said of this admirable woman. She was a most fit companion for Rutherford Hayes, and her disposition had a most happy effect on his. He was often inclined to be silent and sad; she was gay, witty and sparkling as a mountain spring; with him, religious services were a solemn duty; with her, they were a happy privilege; she was playful, witty, light-hearted and unconsciously forced him to merriment. He was charitable and generous out of a sense of duty; she performed kind acts because she loved to make others happy. Their lives ran parallel; his keen sense of duty and her unbounded love always brought them to the same conclusion. What motive could have induced Rutherford Hayes to abandon his old home and thriving business, many warm friends. He had secured enough in business to be independent and comfortable, and yet Rutherford Hayes followed a destiny he could not fathom, and moved by an impulse none could explain, determined to set his face towards Ohio, that terrible wilderness, then the home of wild beasts and savage men, where he arrived after many difficulties, accompanied by his wife, Sophia, his two young children, Fanny and Lorenzo, and Sardes Birchard, Mrs. Hayes' brother. The years 1821-22 were terrible years for the people of Ohio. During these years a malignant fever swept over the state like a simoon, smiting with deadly blow the young and the old, in many instances, whole households were exterminated at one swoop. Rutherford Hayes was one of its victims. It was but a few short hours after the first feverish flashes ran through his limbs before the poison had performed its dreadful mission, and Rutherford Hayes passed away from this life; he died July 22, 1822, and the desolation surrounding his lovely wife can be imagined only by those who have experienced such a bereavment under similar circumstances. Oct. 4, 1822, less than three months after the death of his father, and in his house, built four years before, was born, the Hon. Rutherford Birchard Hayes.

UNIQUE LETTER WRITTEN IN 1639.

This unique and interesting letter of the Rev. John Davenport, communicated by the Rev. John Wadington, of London, was published for the first time by the Historical and Genealogical Society of New England. The Rev. John Davenport held a correspondence with Lady Mary De Vere, who was a daughter of Sir John Tracy, Kt., of Toddington, Gloucestershire, who was of the family of the Tracy's of Norwich, Conn. In the British Museum, are several letters by him, written to her from London, Rotterdam and New Haven. In the history and genealogy of the Davenport family, A. B. Davenport, Esq., has printed many of these letters entire, and from others made extracts; we quote from an account of Lady De Vere, prefixed to these letters. "Lady Mary De Vere was the wife of Horatio Lord De Vere, Baron of Tilbury, son of John De Vere, the fifteenth Earl of Oxford. During the reign of Charles, the first, he went into Holland as a commander of a regiment, sent to join with the United Princes, of Germany. He is characterized by Fuller in his "Worthies," as of excellent temper, being true of him as what is said of the Caspian Sea, "that it doth never ebb or flow;" observing a constant tenor, he is neither elated with success nor depressed by defeat. He died May 2, 1635, and was interred near his brother, Sir Francis De Vere, in Westminster Abbey. By his wife, Lady Mary De Vere, he had five daughters, his co-heirs, viz.: Elizabeth, married John Hollis, second Earl of Clare; Mary, married Sir Roger Townsend, Baronet of Raynham, in the county of Norfolk, after whose decease she married Mildmay Fane, second Earl of Westmoreland; Catherine, married first, Oliver, son and heir of Sir John St. John, of Lydiard Tregaze, second, John Lord Paulet; Anne, married the celebrated parliamentarian, Gen. Sir Thomas Lord Fairfax; Dorothy, married John Wolstenholm, Esq., eldest son of Sir John Wolstenholm, Baronet of Nostel, county York."

THE LETTER.

To the Right Honorable Lady Mary Vere—Madam: “By the good hand of our God, upon us my deare child is safely arrived with sundry desirable friends, as Mr. Fenwick and his lady, Mr. Whitfield, and to our great comfort thyre passage was so ordered as it appears that prayers were accepted, for they had no sickness in ye ship except a little sea-sickness: not one dead, but they brought to shore one more than was known to be in the vessel at their coming forth, for a woman was safely delivered of a child, and both are alive and well. They attained to the Haven, where they would be in seven weeks. There provisions at sea held good to ye last, about the time when we guessed they might approach near us, we sett a day apart for public extraordinary humiliation, by fasting and prayer, in which we commended them unto ye hands of our God, whom windes and seaes obey, and shortly after sent out a pinnis to pilott them to our harbour; for it was ye first ship that ever cast anchor in this place. But our pilott having watched for them a fort-night, grew weary and returned home, and the very next night, the ship came in, guided by God’s hand to our towne. The sight of ye harbour did so please the captain of the ship and all the passengers that he called it Fair Haven, since that, another ship hath brought sundry passengers, and a third is expected daily, and which is more, the Lord our God hath bestowed upon us, the greatest outward privilages under the sun, to have and enjoy all His ordinances, purely dispensed in a church, gathered and constituted according to His owne mind in all things, and hath promised that in every place where he shall sett his name, He will come unto his people and bless them, and now madam my desire is that your La-P (lady-ship) may be assured that whatever interest I have in J X, and by him in fellowship with his people at the throne of grace, it is wholly for your advantage, if in anything I may express ye reality of my thankfulness to your honour, for my favours formerly received, and for your helpfull-

ness to my little one in carrying him in your coach to Sir Theodore Maherne, for advice about his neck, and for your cost in a coate, of which bounty and labour of your love, my servant, Ann, hath made full report to us. The Lord recompense ye, same to your La-P, and to your noble family, one-hundred-fold, I hope befor this time He hath rebuked the feverness and small-pox in your family, which has lately affected it, and will make the losse of Mr. St. Jo, a mercy to your daughter, whom I love and honor in the Lord. The Lord ye holy one of Israil, our redeemer, hath undertaken to teach his people to profitt as well by his provedences as by his ordinances even by all his dispensations; accordingly I believe He will, and pray that he may be pleased graciously to make this losse be her gain, and these trials evidences of his fatherly love, both to your La-P, and her, that mortality of earthly comforts and the dissolubleness of the marriage-bond, with ye creature may quicken us to secure our interest in the everlasting God, and our marriage with the Lord J. C., by an everlasting covenant of his grace, which nothing can dissolve. My wife presenteth her humble service with much thankfulness to your La-P. We both desire in like manner to salute my Lady Wake, and all your noble daughters. Had I time, I would write to Mrs. Watson, your scribe, at present, I have no more liberty than to salute her, and to let her know that if her affections stand hetherward, I shall be gladly be useful to her in what I may and do think that it would be comfortable to her many wais. But it is God who setts the bounds of our habitations, to whose everlasting doings I commend your Lady-ship with all yours in Jesus Christ, in whom I rest. Your honorable La-P, much obliged in ye Lord."

THE FASHIONS OF NORWICH

The fashions of Norwich in 1757. The dress of that middle period can not be eulogized for its simplicity, or economy. The wardrobe of the higher circle, was rich and extravagant, and among the females of all classes, there was a passion for gathering and having articles of attire, beyond what was necessary for present use, or even years ahead. It was an object of ambition to have a chest full of linen, a pillow bier of stockings, and other articles in proportion laid by. In this connection we present a schedule of the wardrobe of widow "Elizabeth White," of Norwich, as contained in the inventory of her effects, taken Aug. 16, 1757. She was a daughter of Samuel Bliss, and relict of Daniel White, of Middletown. After the death of her husband in 1726, she returned to Norwich, and died there July 2, 1757, aged 71. The items of jewelry, plate and apparel, were circumstantially enumerated, but we give them in abridged form: she had many gowns of durog striped stuff, plaid stuff, black-silk crape, and blue camlet, a scarlet cloth cloak, and one of blue satin, flowered mantel and fur below scarf, a woolen petticoat with border, camlet riding-hood, long silk hood, velvet hood, white hoods brimed with laces and ribbons, a silk bonnet, and 19 dress caps, cambric lace handkerchiefs, silk and 16 linen ones, a lace apron embroidered, one green taffety, and 14 aprons in all, a silver girdle, a blue girdle, four pieces of flowered satin, many yards of silver ribbon, a parcel of crewels, and handsome fans, Turkey worked chairs, a gold jewel necklace, deaths-head, gold ring, set of gold sleeve buttons, plain gold ring, gold locket, silver hair-pin, silver cloak-clasps, a precious stone, set in silver, for a button, a large silver tankard, a silver cup with two handles, one silver cup with one handle, silver spoons. The next generation was still more extravagant. Richer goods were imported, and more splendor was exhibited. The following is an illustrative instance: The daughters of Gen. Jabez Huntington were sent successively, at the ages of 14 and 15 to finish their education at a boarding school in Boston. The lady who kept the establishment was of high social standing, and made it a point, of taking her pupils often in society, that their manners might be formed according to the prevailing codes of politeness and etiquette. Of course the wardrobe prepared for the young ladies was rich in articles of ornament and display. One of the daughters, who had been carefully fitted out with twelve elegant silk dresses, had been but a short time in Boston, when her instructress wrote to her parents, requesting that another dress should be procured for her, made of a certain rich fabric, that had recently been imported, in order that her appearance in society might be equal to her rank. A thirteenth robe of silk of the requisite richness was sent. Before the revolution, wigs full and curled for clergyman and other dignitaries were white, and powdered, red cloaks, or rouquelours, and buckles or bows of ribbon at the knees and in the shoes, were worn by gentlemen. Even young boys were often arrayed in cocked hats, small clothes and knee buckles. If on ceremonious occasions, wigs were not worn, gentlemen had their hair crimped, curled and powdered by barbers. A full dress for gentlemen were mostly made of silk, with trimmings of gold and silver lace. The waist-coat most always highly embroidered. Ladies wore trains to their dresses or gowns, often quite long, and when they walked out they threw the end over the right arm. They dressed their feet in silk stockings, sharp-toed slippers, always made of rich material, mostly of embroidered satin, and with very high heels. At one time sharply gored gowns, and cumbersome hoops were the fashion. Cushions stuffed with wool, covered with silk, were used to dress the hair. At one period, feathers were much worn on the head, surmounting a high turban of gauze. Parasols were unknown, or of rare occurrence, but a fan, nearly a foot and a half in length, was often carried open to keep off the sun. A lady in full dress for great occasions, displayed a rich brocade, with open skirt and trail, front skirt trimmed and embroidered elegantly, with stomacher and full ruffles of real lace at the elbows. As the great struggle for liberty gradually over-shadowed the land, and the sacrifices necessary to consummate the revolution, began to be appreciated, a decided change took place in regard to dress, amusements, and display ; women discarded all imported articles, ornaments, etc., arrayed themselves wholly in domestic goods. Gentlemen also, who had been accustomed to appear in society in the daintiest costume, following the example set by the women, discarded their shining stocks, their linen cambric ruffles, silk stockings, silver buckles, and other articles of foreign production, and went back to leather shoe-strings, home-spun clothes, etc.

A handsome new church was dedicated in 1876 to La Bonne Sainte Anne de Beaupre. To it were removed the old altar and pulpit, both of the seventeenth century, and the relics and original ornaments of the old church. Among these are an altar-piece by Le Brun, the gift of the Marquis de Tracy ; a silver reliquary, and a painting by Le Francois, both the gift of Mons. Le Laval ; a chasubel, worked by Anne of Austria, and a bone from the finger of Sainte Anne.

A great number of the Norwich Tracy's have been graduates of Yale college.

Letter of SIR BERNARD BURKE, C. B., L. L. D., Ulster King of Arms, Dublin Castle. Author of the Extinct and Dormant Peerages; The Landed Gentry; The General Armory; Vicissitudes of Families, and Reminiscences Ancestral, Anecdotal and Historic.

DUBLIN CASTLE, IRELAND, November 3, 1888.

DEAR MRS. ABBEY:

I am and have been so ill since I last wrote to you, that I am obliged to use the pen of an amanuensis. I do not like waiting until I am better and able with my own hand to express how much I am pleased with your admirable history of the GREAT HOUSE OF TRACY. I have CAREFULLY gone through the volume and my estimate is formed on a minute perusal. When I return to my usual pursuits, which, please God, will be soon, I trust to obtain some genealogical additions for your acceptance.

With esteem and regard, yours most truly,

J. BERNARD BURKE, Ulster.
