“ She was as a rose
Gathered in loveliness 'mid perfumed flowers,
And warbling birds of love, yet drooping still
For the pure breath of that celestial clime,
Where summer hath no cloud. She with firm hand
Grasped the strong hope of everlasting life,
And then in trembling yet confiding trust,
Didst dare the waves of Death's tempestuous flood.”

Tribute to her memory by L. H. SIGOURNEY.

1. Louisa Maria, b. 14 June, 1818, at Troy, N. Y. She m. 15 Sept., 1838, Joseph King Fenno Mansfield, b. 22 Dec., 1803, at New Haven, Conn. He graduated at West Point military academy in 1822, the second in his class, and was appointed a second lieutenant in the corps of engineers. He was promoted to a first lieutenantcy in 1832, and in 1838 was appointed a captain of engineers. Most of the time after he graduated, and previous to the war with Mexico, he was engaged in different parts of the United States as an engineer in the construction of military works. In the war with Mexico he served under Gen. Taylor as chief engineer. He received the brevet of major for his conduct in the defence of Fort Brown, and the brevet of lieutenant-colonel for his gallantry at the storming of Monterey in Sept., 1846, where he was severely wounded. And he received a brevet of colonel for his services in the battles of Buena Vista, in Feb., 1847. In May, 1853, he was appointed inspector-general with the rank of colonel, which office he continued to hold until the 14 of May, 1861, when he was appointed a brigadier general of the regular army. After the disastrous battles near Bull Run, under General Pope, in August, 1862, he was ordered to Washington as a member of the court of inquiry in relation to those battles. But upon his application for active service he was appointed a major-general of volunteers, and ordered to report to Gen. McClellan, who gave him the command of the army corps which had been under the command of General Banks. In the sanguinary battle of Antietam, on the 17th of Sept., 1862, he was mortally wounded while cheering on his corps to a brilliant but unsuccessful charge upon a part of the enemy's line, and died the next day. She survived him, and was living at Middletown in 1863. They had five children : Samuel Mather, b. 23 Sept., 1839 ; Mary Louisa, b. 23 March, 1841, d. 22 June, 1863 ; Joseph Totten, b. 4 Oct., 1843, d. 15 July, 1844 ; Henry Livingston, b. 31 March, 1845 ; and Katherine Mather, b. 1 May, 1850.

VI. LUCY TRACY (2506), born at Norwich, Conn., 20 July, 1744, eldest daughter of Dr. Elisha Tracy (591) of Norwich, by his first wife, Lucy Huntington, was a great granddaughter of Margaret Post (15) of the third generation. She m. 7 April, 1763, Dr. Philip Turner, b. 25 Feb., 1740, at Norwich, eldest son of Capt. Philip Turner and Mrs. Anne (Huntington) Adgate of Norwich.

[This Anne (Huntington) Adgate, b. 20 March, 1715, at Norwich, who m. 24 April, 1739, Capt. Philip Turner, was the widow of Thomas Adgate the 3d of Norwich, and was the third daughter of Daniel Huntington and Abigail Bingham, and granddaughter of Deacon Simon Huntington the first, and Sarah Clark of Norwich. Capt. Philip Turner b. about 1716, at Scituate, was probably a great grandson of Humphrey Turner of Scituate, who came from England previous to 1730; as follows: The emigrant, Humphrey Turner, had two sons by the name of John. The first m. 12 Nov., 1645, Mary Brewster. The last, called by his father young John, m. 25 April, 1649, Anne James, and had a son, Philip, b. 18 Aug., 1673, at Scituate, who was probably the father of Capt. Philip Turner of Norwich, who d. 13 Jan., 1755, in the 39th year of his age.]

Dr. Turner, for three years previous to his marriage, had been an assistant surgeon to a provincial regiment, in the service of the crown, in the French war, and became a very skillful surgeon. They settled at Norwich, where he went into the practice of his profession with distinguished success. At the commencement of the revolution, he was with the American troops at Boston. He was with the army at New York in 1776, where his services were of immense value to the wounded in the battles of Flatbush, Harlem Heights, and White Plains. In 1777 he was appointed surgeon-general of the army of the United States for the eastern department; the duties of which situation he continued to discharge with ability till about the close of the war. He then returned to his private practice at Norwich, which he continued there for nearly twenty years. About 1800 they removed to the city of New York. He was soon after appointed post surgeon to the troops in the several fortifications in and about New York. It was there that, in the spring of 1809, the writer hereof, while visiting a brother who was an officer in the army on Bedlow's Island, became acquainted with the then venerable Dr. Turner (whose wife was a first cousin of the writer's mother). He d. in 1815 at New York, and was buried with military honors.

Their children were:

6868. John, b. 29 May, 1764, at Norwich. He m. Hannah Huntington, b. 29 April, 1765, daughter of Jonathan Huntington and Eunice Lathrop, and settled at Norwich, where he was an eminent physician and surgeon, and was a member of the legislature. He d. 7 May, 1837, at Norwich, and she d. 7 May, 1845. They had four children:

1. George Frederick, b. about 1791, d. 9 Feb., 1813, at Norwich, unm.

She was his third wife, and they settled at New London. Judge Marvin Waite was a lawyer, and went into practice at New London about 1769 in partnership with Samuel Holden Parsons (see No. 2115), and was a successful practitioner there until he retired from the bar about 1800. He was frequently a member of the state legislature; was a judge of the county court; was a presidential elector at the first election of Gen. Washington, and was one of the council appointed to dispose of the lands belonging to the state and establish the school fund. He d. June, 1815, at New London; and his last wife d. April, 1851, at Norwich. He had by her one child:

John Turner Waite, b. 27 Aug., 1811, at New London. He was educated at Trinity college, Hartford, and was a lawyer. He m. April 1842, Elizabeth Harris, at New York. They settled at Norwich Town, where he held the office of postmaster for a few years, and where he was a successful and very distinguished lawyer, and where they were living in 1863. They had three children: Marvin, b. 1843; Anne

Eliza, b. 1846; and Mary Elizabeth, b. 1853. Marvin was a lieutenant of volunteers and was killed at the battle of Antietam, 17 September, 1862. The following was written in reference to his gallantry and early death:

His gallant young spirit, so ardent and bold,
 Forth has gone on its long march eternal,
 And the warm, beating heart is now dead, still and cold,
 That o'erran with all feelings fraternal.

The eye that was lighted with honor and truth,
 And often with love and devotion,
 Is cold as the sod that has covered his youth,
 And dark as the depths of the ocean.

His smooth, boyish cheek, where the summer's warm breath
 Had left but the faintest of traces,
 Is pale as the snow, at the cold touch of death,
 And bereft of its blossoming graces.

He was youthful in years, but let justice be done
 To the spirit, high, daring and tender;
 His country can honor, 'mid all her brave sons,
 No bolder and truer defender.

Where the iron hail flew like a tempest of wrath,
 He stood with the battle-storm round him;
 Where blood, shed like rain, made a dark gory path,
 The death, that had sought him, there found him.

It found him—it smote him—Oh! God, that thine arm
 Had stretched forth a shield and a shelter,
 To ward from his person all evil and harm—
 Left there on the red field to welter.

Bear him back from the field where he gallantly fell,
 To the shade of the hills of his childhood;
 Through the boughs of the maple let symphonies swell,
 O'er his grave by the green spreading wildwood.

And the mountain brooks, dashing so swiftly along,
 As to listening willows they prattle,
 Shall chant, as they go, the sad requiem song,
 Of the soldier who sleeps from life's battle.

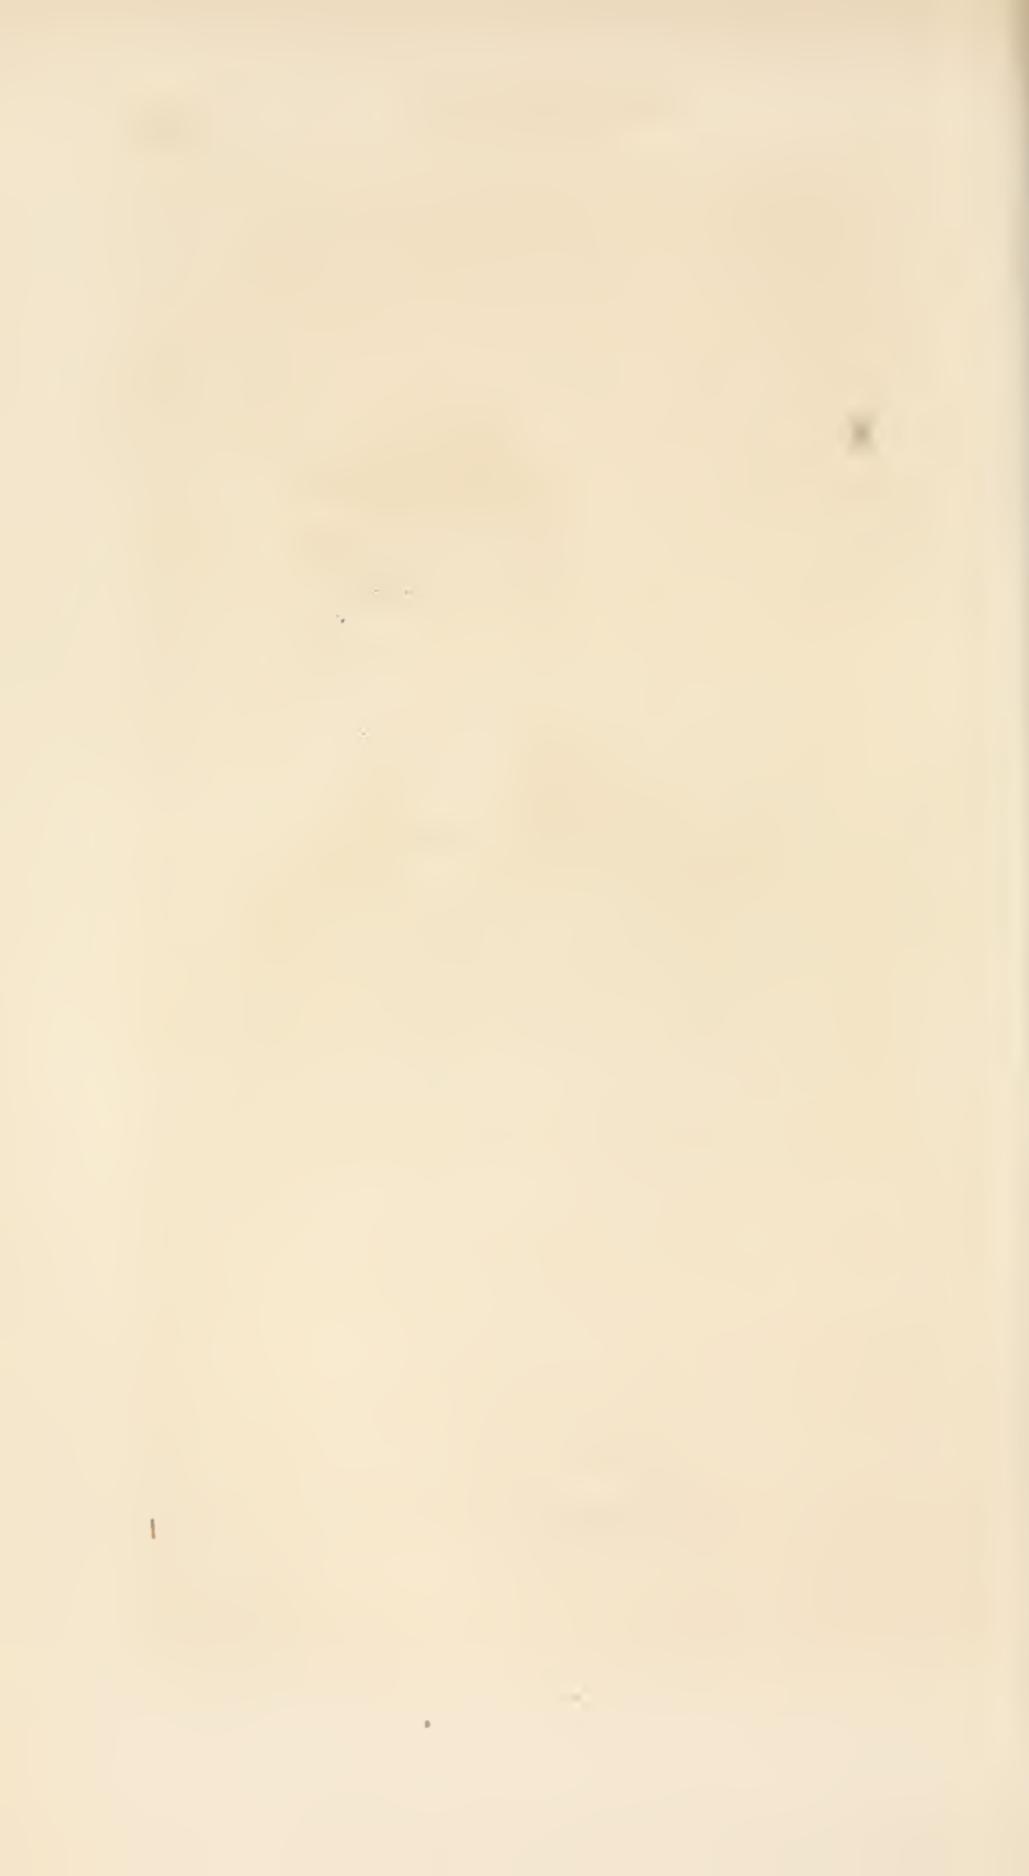

The first wife of Judge Marvin Waite, to whom he was m. 25 April, 1779, was Martha Jones of New London, by whom he had seven children: Marvin; Martha Jones; Harriet, who m. Francis Richards; Richard; Howard; Oliver; and Eliza, who m. Jediaiah Huntington of Norwich.

VI. DR. PHILEMON TRACY (2512), born at Norwich, Conn., 30 May, 1757, second son of Dr. Elisha Tracy (591) of Norwich, by his second wife, Elizabeth Dorr (513), was a great grandson of Margaret Post (15) of the third generation. He m. 1785, Abigail Trott, and settled at Norwich, where he was a very distinguished physician, and received the honorary degree of doctor of medicine at Yale in 1817. He practiced medicine in his native town more than fifty-five years. He excelled in the investigation of chronic diseases, especially those which, from their complication, demanded deep research and accurate discrimination. Mrs. Sigourney says : "His habit was minutely to investigate every symptom before prescribing; to require strict obedience to his prescriptions; to regulate diet and regimen, and to give as little medicine as possible." He d. in 1837, at Norwich, at the age of 80 years, having become blind some time before his death.

Their children were :

6887. Phineas Lyman, b. 25 Dec., 1786, at Norwich. He graduated at Yale 1806, and was a lawyer. He m. Harriet Lay, and settled at Batavia, N. Y., where he was a member of congress, and where they were living in 1859 s. p.

6889. Richard Proctor, b. 21 March, 1791, at Norwich (twin). He was a physician, and occupied his father's homestead at Norwich, Conn., where he was living in 1860, unm. He graduated in 1816 at the medical department of Yale college.
6890. Albert Haller, b. 17 June, 1793, at Norwich. He was a lawyer, and settled at Buffalo, where he was elected to congress at the early age of 24, but attained the constitutional age before congress convened in Dec., 1819; and he was elected to the two next congresses. During his six years' service in congress he was much respected by all parties, and finally succeeded in carrying through a bill for the relief of his constituents upon the Niagara frontier for the destruction of their property by the enemy in the war of 1812. He subsequently served eight years in the state senate, where he rendered very valuable services to the state, particularly as a member of the court of dernier resort. He subsequently retired from public life, and devoted his time to his private affairs, and became a very wealthy man. He m. 23 Nov., 1825, Harriet Foote Norton, daughter of Ebenezer Foote Norton, Esq., and Abigail Kibbe of Canandaigua, and afterwards of Buffalo, and granddaughter of Aaron Norton and Martha Foote of Goshen, Conn., (see Foote Family, No. 2314.) The following is an extract of an obituary notice of him in a Buffalo paper :

"We have left for ourselves but little space in which to describe Mr. Tracy's intellectual and moral characteristics. He has of late years been chiefly distinguished among us by his extraordinary conversational talents. He was one of the few Americans who cultivated this beautiful and difficult art. His mastery of it was complete, and won the admiration of all who were admitted to his society; distinguishing him while yet a youth in the circles of Washington. Every subject, whether gay or severe, seemed equally agreeable to him, and was treated with a wealth of diction, a felicity of expression, and a justness of thought, which can seldom be surpassed.

"His mind was both analytical and discursive; skeptical, yet eminently open to conviction. Always ready to abandon old opinions when he discovered that they were false, he stubbornly resisted every opinion, however venerable or common, which could not stand the tests of reason. In his youth, without instruction, he acquired sufficient knowledge of Latin to read the best known Roman authors. He had also some acquaintance with French, and was familiar with most of the philosophic and a few of the lighter writers of that language. These acquisitions he greatly prized, and was accustomed to say that they were an invaluable treasure to him. His knowledge of English literature, judged from any point, must be said to have been very extensive. He was an industrious and an unprejudiced reader of the new as well as the old. He did not commit the folly of stolidly rejecting romance, but found constant pleasure in the pages of Fielding, Dickens, Thackeray and Bulwer. He sought eagerly for the latest publications, and was an admirer of Macaulay, Tennyson, Ruskin, Longfellow and Carlyle. A lack of imagination measurably impaired his judgment upon belles-lettres, but notwithstanding this defect, his criticisms were highly valued and eagerly sought after by some of the most distinguished and successful of our own writers.

"It was in political and metaphysical science that his mind found its most congenial nutriment. Upon these subjects he had read much and thought more. No one who knew him and observed his keen instinct after truth, his quickness in perceiving error, the agility and subtlety of his intellect, and his judicial skepticism and fairness, can doubt that he might easily have taken high rank as a political or metaphysical writer.

"Mr. Tracy's moral character was equally worthy of admiration. He has dwelt among us for more than forty years, but has done no act of which he or we need to feel ashamed. Simple in his tastes, frugal in expenditure, generous in hospitality, free to the approach of the humble, ever at hand to console or sustain the unfortunate and the distressed, ever ready to rebuke the adventurous and oversanguine; to his debtors most lenient, to his creditors paying every demand; the guide of the young, the counselor of the widowed and the orphan; an honorable foe, a faithful friend, scrupulous in the performance of every public and every private duty, he has exhibited to us for our emulation a noble example of a good citizen, a wise statesman, a republican gentleman, and a kind and most liberal man."

Albert H. Tracy d. 12 Sept., 1859 at Buffalo, where his widow was living in 1863. They had two children:

VII. CYNTHIA HYDE (2735), born at Lebanon, Conn., 4 Dec., 1792, sixth daughter of Daniel Hyde (687) and Mary Hyde (744), was a great great granddaughter of Samuel Hyde (4) of the third generation. She m. 16 March, 1818, Dr. Archibald Welch, b. 13 March, 1794, at Mansfield, Conn., youngest son of Rev. Moses Cook Welch, D. D., of Mansfield, Conn., by his second wife, Clarissa Ashley, and grandson of Rev. Daniel Welch and Martha Cook of Mansfield (see 2 Sprague's Ann., 234), and great grandson of Rev. Jonathan Ashley of Deerfield, Mass. He attended two courses of medical lectures at Yale college, and was licensed to practice as a physician in Sept., 1816, and practiced sixteen years in his native town. In Dec., 1832, they removed to Wethersfield, Conn., where he was a successful practitioner for the next sixteen years, and during ten years of that time he had the charge of the medical department of the Connecticut state prison. In 1836 he received the honorary degree of doctor of medicine, at Yale. In 1848 they removed to Hartford, Conn., where he continued in the practice of his profession until his death, 6 May, 1853.

Dr. Welch was a member of the legislature, and occupied the situations of secretary, vice-president, and president of the state medical society, and was highly esteemed by all who knew him, as an amiable, correct, and skillful Christian physician and gentleman.

He was very hospitable, and enjoyed the company of his friends at his own fireside and around his own table. Very many of these will always remember the cheerful welcome they received at his door, and the gratification they imparted as well as enjoyed at his house. His conversation was pleasant and lively—often humorous, and not unfrequently sparkling with delicate wit. No dogmatism, or spirit of controversy, marred the pleasure of his society; and unless with very intimate friends, he politely deferred to others, when differing in opinion from them. In his friendships he was strongly attracted by a largeness of heart, generous affections, and originality of thought. His friends were very numerous; and this could hardly be otherwise with one so kind, and so disposed to social and friendly intercourse.

His disposition was naturally quick; but by self-culture had been subdued to almost unvarying evenness and sweetness. He had extraordinary control over all the propensities of his nature. In the great study of life—in the due regulation of the passions and affections of our nature—he had made great advances.

Dr. Welch had an exceedingly nice and accurate sense of justice and right, but his placable disposition inclined him towards the merciful, rather than the stern and that severity of justice which is untempered by compassion. Truthfulness was also, as has been indicated, one of the most prominent elements of his character, and gave an individuality to all his thoughts and feelings and actions.

His demeanor was modest in deference to others and in a becoming discharge of manifest duty. He was wholly free from straining after effect, and from all species of acting. Nothing was farther from his character than pretension of any sort. He had great simplicity and naturalness of conduct, and was repelled by any affectation in others.

He had an earnest belief in whatever opinion he held, and in general quite as earnest conviction of the erroneous character of opposite views. It is not surprising, therefore, that such a mind should make less account than is sometimes necessary, of the force of constitutional or educational bias in the formation of intellectual views. It was his disposition to judge of the correctness of a proposition by its moral bearings. Hence questions of propriety, or policy, or expediency, had to pass a double scrutiny before they were approved by him. It is not strange, therefore, that he should pronounce severe judgments upon those who seemed to disregard the moral bearings of a question, in accepting the cold deductions of logic.

In early manhood he came to a decision which placed him in antagonism, not only with the general sentiment and practice of the people with whom he lived, but with the uniform custom of his fellow physicians. When he commenced the practice of medicine in 1816, he resolved never to take, at the houses of any of his patients, a drop of anything which could intoxicate. He was among the first, if not the first man in his own town, that practiced "total abstinence," and the first to come out openly in the cause of temperance. The first public lecture on this subject, in Mansfield, was delivered at his instigation. Among the last labors of his pen were found notes for a lecture on temperance, which he had been requested to deliver in his native town. His interest in this subject never abated; and when the idea was broached of rooting out the traffic in intoxicating liquors on the principle that it is a nuisance, and, like all nuisances, a proper subject for legal prohibition, he at once accepted the proposition, and entered heartily into such measures as were intended to secure this prohibition in his native state.

Dr. Welch was well informed in national and state affairs, and was well acquainted with the leading views of the different political parties. His preferences were for the most part in favor of the principles of the whigs; but in deciding the merits of a question he was more careful to decide upon its moral bearings than its relations to party.

Dr. Welch united with the Congregational church in Wethersfield in 1841. His hopeful conversion took place several years before this, but he delayed his public profession of religion from a distrust of himself. Ever after his father's decease he had family worship daily in his household. He was little disposed to speak of his own religious experience, but the principles of Christianity lay deep in the groundwork of his character, and found expression in his daily life and habits. They were recognized in his business transactions no less than in his family government. There was no demoralizing difference between his professions and his conduct in dealing with men.

He was killed in the railroad cars, on his return from a meeting of the American medical association at New York, by the shocking disaster which destroyed the lives of about fifty persons (many of them eminent physicians) at the draw bridge upon the railroad at Norwalk in 1853. She survived him, and was living at Hartford in 1857.

VI. Col. DAVID HOUGH (2548), born at Norwich, Conn., 13 March, 1753, third son of Capt. David Hough (611) of Norwich, and his first wife, Desire Clark, was a great grandson of Sarah Post (17) of the third generation. He m. Jan., 1775, Abigail Huntington, b. 3 Jan., 1753, third daughter of James Huntington and Elizabeth Darby of Norwich, and granddaughter of James Huntington and Priscilla Miller of Norwich, and great granddaughter of Deacon Simeon Huntington, one of the original proprietors of Norwich, who was born at Norwich in England, and was son of Simon Huntington and Margaret Baret of Norwich in England; which last mentioned Simon Huntington, died on his passage to America, in 1633. In 1776 and 1777, David Hough was in the service of the confederate states, as a ship carpenter, and assisted in building the flotilla on Lake Champlain, and the thirty-six gun frigate, the Confederacy, in the Thames river near Norwich. In 1778 he removed with his family to Lebanon, N. H., where he settled on a farm. He represented the town of Lebanon in the state legislature many years, was a justice of the peace and a colonel of militia, and was chosen a delegate to the convention to adopt the constitution of the United States, and was collector of the internal revenue under the administration of President John Adams. In 1803 and in 1805 he was elected to the congress of the United States and served in the house of representatives four years. I have not ascertained the dates of the deaths of himself and wife. But he was living as late as 1827, when he had attained the age of 74 years.

Their children were :

7355. David, b. 26 Jan., 1788, at Lebanon. He m. in 1809, Rebecca Foster, and lived for a few years in New York. He then removed to Lebanon, N. H., and occupied his father's homestead farm. APPENDIX,

DESCENT OF MABEL HARLAKENDEN,

Second wife of Gov. John Haynes of Hartford, from King Egbert I, and from the kings and nobility of England, Scotland, France, Spain, &c., and showing also the descent from her of many of the descendants of the first William Hyde of Norwich, who are embraced in the body of the Hyde Genealogy.

1 GENERATION.—Egbert, the first saxon king of all England, was the eleventh in descent from Cerdic, the Saxon, who founded the West Saxon kingdom of the heptarchy at the commencement of the sixth century. Floutius, a monk, of Worcester, who wrote in the first quarter of the twelfth century, endeavors to show that Cerdic was a descendant, in the tenth generation, of Woden or Odin (called by the Romans Othinus) and his wife, Frea or Frigga; as follows:

1. Woden, made himself master of a considerable part of the north of Europe, in the third century; and died in what is now Sweden. By his wife, Frea or Frigga, he had six sons: Wecta, Caser, Wethelgeat, Weldeg, Beldeg, and Eaxneta. (See Speed's Hist. of Eng., 200, &c.)

2. Beldeg, or Balder, their fifth son, m. Nanna, daughter of Gewar, and had a son,

3. Brandius, or Brando; who was father of

4. Froodigarius, or Froethgar; who had a son,

5. Wigga; who was the father of

6. Gewesius, or Gewisch; whose son,

7. Effa, or Esta, was father of

8. Effa the second; whose son,

9. Eliseus, was the father of

10. Cerdic, the first king of the West Saxons.

Others make the descent of Cerdic, from Woden, or Odin, thus: Beldeg; Brando; Froethgar; Frewin; Wigga; Gewisch; Esta; Eliseus; Cerdic.

Probably all this rests on tradition, which is not much to be relied on in matters of genealogy, where there are no records or monuments, or contemporaneous history to support it. I, therefore, leave this early descent of King Egbert, to those antiquarians who claimed the descent of Woden from the eldest son of the patriarch, Noah. (See Speed, 196, 200.)

The descent from Cerdic to Egbert, the seventeenth king of the West Saxons, is much more reliable; although it was not in the line of kings after the third generation. It was as follows:

1. Cerdic, died in 534; after having reigned about thirty-three years. He had two sons, Kenric, his successor; and Chelwulf, who died in the life time of his father, and whose great grandson, Kentwin, was the seventh king of the West Saxons.

2. Kenric, succeeded to the crown in 534, upon the death of his father. He reigned twenty-six years, and died in 560. He had three sons: Cheaulin, his successor; Cuthwulf, who died in 572, leaving a son, Cearlik, who wrested the kingdom from Cheaulin, his uncle, in 592, and was fourth king of the West Saxons; and Cuth, whose son, Chelwulf, was the fifth king of the West Saxons.

3. Cheaulin, succeeded to the crown upon the death of his father, in 560, and reigned about thirty-two years; when he was banished from his kingdom, and died in exile, in 593. He had two sons: Cuth, who was killed in 585, and Cuthwin.

4. Cuthwin, was killed in a battle with the Britons, and died in 584, during the reign of his father, leaving two sons: Kenwald, and Cuth.

5. Cuth, died, leaving a son,

6. Chewald, who was the father of Kenred.

7. Kenred had four sons and one daughter. His eldest son, Iua, was the eleventh king of the west Saxons. Another of his sons was

8. Ingills, who was the father of

9. Eoppa, who left a son,

10. Easa, who was the father of

11. Alkmund, sometimes called Ethelmund, who was the father of

12. Egbert, the 17th king of the West Saxons.

Egbert succeeded to the West Saxon crown upon the death of King Bithrick in the year 800 (Mathew of Westminster says, in 801). He m. the Lady Redburga; and in the course of the first twenty years of his reign he succeeded in uniting the whole heptarchy under his rule. And he was in fact the first Saxon king of all England, though he did not assume that title. He continued to reign about sixteen years longer, and d. 4 Feb., 836. He had two sons and one daughter: Ethelwulf, his successor; Ethelstan; and Edith, abbess of Polesworth, commonly called St. Edith.

2 GEN.—Ethelwulf, the eldest son, succeeded to the crown upon the death of his father. He m. I Osburga, daughter of Oslac, an English nobleman, and had by her five sons and one daughter: Athelstan, who died before his father; Ethelbald, Ethelbert, Ethelred, and Alfred, who successively wore the crown of England; and Elswith. After the death of Osberga, in his old age, he married a young wife, Judith, daughter of Charles the Bald, king and emperor of France, and great granddaughter of the Emperor Charlemagne. He d. 18 Jan., 857, without issue by her. She subsequently m. Baldwin, the first count of Flanders. She was ancestress of Matilda, the wife of William the Conqueror; of Mabel Harlakenden, the second wife of Gov. John Haynes of Hartford; of the lords St. John of Bletsoe; of Elizabeth Mason, wife of William Griswold Hillhouse of Montville (see No. 2147); and of Barbara Lucy, the wife of Richard Tracy of Stanway (see Appendix B).

3 GEN.—Alfred the Great, b. in 849, youngest son of King Ethelwulf, succeeded to the crown 23 March, 872, upon the death of his youngest brother, King Ethelred I. He m. in 869 Alswitha, daughter of the Mercian earl Ethelred Muchel and Edburga his wife. He d. 28 Oct., 901, and she d. about 904. They had three sons and three daughters: Edmund, who died in his father's lifetime, s. p.; Edward, the successor of his father; Ethelwald, who died unm.; Ethelfleda, who m. Ethelbert, Duke of Mercia; Ethelgida, abbess of Shaftsbury; and Alfritha, who m. Baldwin II, count of Flanders, son of Baldwin, the first count of Flanders, and Judith his wife who was the second wife of her grandfather, King Ethelwulf.

4 GEN.—Edward the Elder, second son of Alfred the Great, succeeded to the crown upon the death of his father. He m. Eguina, the daughter of a shepherd or farmer, and had by her two sons and one daughter: Athelstan, his successor; Alfred, who died in his father's lifetime; and Edith, afterwards called sister Beatrice, who m. Selrick, the Danish king of Northumberland, and afterwards was abbess of Tamworth.

Edward the Elder then m. Elfreda, daughter of Earl Ethelhelme, and had by her two sons and six daughters: Elsward, who died at the same time of the death of his father, s. p.; Edwin, who was drowned in the time of King Athelstan; Elfreda, who was abbess of Ramsey; Eguina, who was the second wife of Charles III of France, and was mother of King Louis III; Ethelhild, who became a nun; Edhild, who m. Hugh the Great, duke of France and count of Paris, father of Hugh Capet, and d. s. p.; Edgitha, who m. Otho the Great, emperor of Germany; and Elgina, who m. a nobleman of Italy.

Edward the Elder then m. Edgina, daughter of Earl Sigeline. She survived her husband nearly forty years, and d. 25 Aug., 963. He had by her two sons and two daughters: Edmund, b. 921, who succeeded his half-brother, King Athelstan; Edred, who succeeded his brother Edmund in the kingdom; Edburga, who became a nun; and Edgina, who m. Louis, prince of Aquitaine in France. Edward the Elder d. in 924, and was succeeded by his son, Athelstan.

5 GEN.—Edmund, the eldest son of King Edward the Elder, by his last wife, succeeded to the crown upon the death of his half-brother, King Athelstan, 17 Oct., 940. He m. in the first year of his reign, Elfgiva (the fairies gift), and had two sons: Edwy, b. about 942, and Edgar, b. 943, who successively wore the crown after the death of their uncle, King Edred. King Edmund, d. 26 May, 946, and was succeeded by his brother, Edred.

6 GEN.—Edgar the Peaceable, youngest son of King Edmund, succeeded to the crown upon the death of his elder brother, King Edwy, in 959. He m. in 961, Elffeda the fair, sometimes called Ethelfled, daughter of Earl Ordmar. He had by her one son: Edward, b. about 962, his successor, who is called Edward the Martyr. He then m. Elfreda, daughter of Ordgar, duke of Devonshire, and widow of Earl Ethelwold; and had by her two sons: Edmund, b. 965, who died at the age of 14 years, unm.; and Ethelred, b. about 967, who succeeded his half-brother, King Edward the Martyr.

7 GEN.—Ethelred II., commonly called the Unready, succeeded to the crown, 18 May, 979, upon the assassination of his half-brother, King Edward the Martyr. He m. about 984, when he was but 17 years of age, Elffeda, daughter of the earldorman Thored. He had by her six sons and three daughters: Athelstan, b. about 986, who d. about 1011 s. p.; Egbert, b. about 988, who died young and unm. I. 6. Eldad Taylor, Esq., of Westfield, b. 1708 at Westfield, who m. 1732 Rhoda Dewey, was a member of the senate of Massachusetts, and d. in 1777 while at Boston. He was father of the Rev. John Taylor, who was minister of Deerfield, and of Elizabeth Taylor, b. about 1764 at Westfield, who m. in 1789 Andrew Perkins, Esq., of Norwich (his second wife) and d. 21 May, 1819, and had six children: Frances; Charles; Harriet; Edward; Abigail; and Frances H. Eldad Taylor, Esq., was also the ancestor of Henry W. Taylor, Esq., of Canandaigua, who was one of the judges of the court of appeals of the state of New York.

33 GEN.—Hezekiah Wyllis, b. 23 April, 1672, at Hartford, son of Samuel Wyllis and Ruth Haynes, m. 2 May, 1704, Elizabeth Hobart, b. 8 Feb., 1675, at Topsfield, Mass., eldest daughter of Rev. Jeremiah Hobart and Elizabeth Whiting, his wife, and granddaughter of Rev. Samuel Whiting of Lynn, Mass., and his second wife, Elizabeth St. John. Elizabeth Hobart, his wife, was, through her grandmother, Elizabeth St. John, descended from his ancestress, Joan of Acres, daughter of King Edward I, through her eldest daughter Eleanor De Clare, who m. Hugh Le Dispencer (see No. 2147, and 14 Gen. Reg., 61). Hezekiah Wyllis was secretary of the colony of Connecticut from 1712 to 1734, when he was succeeded by his son George, who held the office of secretary of the colony and of the state of Connecticut about sixty years. Hezekiah Wyllis d. 1734; his wife survived him and d. 24 Dec., 1741. They had six children recorded at Hartford: 1. Ruth Wyllis, b. 22 Feb., 1705, who m. 31 Dec., 1724, Richard Lord of Wethersfield, b. 18 Feb., 1705, third son of Richard and Abigail Warren of Hartford, and had by him five sons and three daughters (see Goodwin, 351). 2. Elizabeth Wyllis, b. 15 July, 1708. 3. George Wyllis, b. 28 May, 1709, died in infancy. 4. George Wyllis 2d, b. 6 Oct., 1710. 5. Mabel Wyllis, b. 13 Feb., 1713. 6. Samuel Wyllis, b. 26 Aug., 1714. (See 13 Gen. Reg., 244 and 344.)

DESCENT OF LIEUT. THOMAS TRACY,

The first of Norwich, from several of the Anglo-Saxon kings of England. Many of his descendants have intermarried with descendants of William Hyde, as will be seen in the body of this work.

For the seven first generations, commencing with Egbert, the first Anglo-Saxon king of all England, see Appendix A.

8 GENERATION.—The Princess Goda, youngest daughter of King Ethelred II, called Ethelred the Unready, by his last wife, Emma of Normandy, daughter of Richard, first duke of Normandy, held lands in Gloucestershire in the reign of her brother, King Edward the Confessor (see 2 Ellis' Domesday Book, 119), which lands remain in the hands of some of her descendants at this time. She m. for her first husband Dreux, count of Vexin, called by English historians Walter De Mante, count of Mantes. He was great grandson of Waleran, who succeeded Hugh the Great, duke of France, father of Hugh Capet as count of Vexin in 956, and is said to be descended from the Emperor Charlemagne and Hildegarde of Swabia, his wife. He went on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and d. in Bythinia about the first of July, 1035, and she d. in 1054. They had four sons: 1. Gauthier (Walter). 2. Rudolf or Ralph. 3. Foulques. 4. Poutoise.

9 GEN.—Rudolf or Ralph De Mantes, their second son, was lord of the manor of Sudely and of Todington, which he inherited from his mother. He was created Earl of Hereford by his uncle, Edward the Confessor, of which earldom his son was deprived in the reign of William the Conqueror. He m. Gethe, who held lands in her own right in Buckinghamshire, and who in Domesday Book is called Gethe, wife of Earl Rudolph. He d. 21 Dec., 1057, and was buried at Peterborough.

10 GEN.—Harold De Mantes, their only son, m. Matilda, daughter of Hugh Lupus, the first earl of Chester, and Ermitiude his wife, and had by her two sons: John De Sudely, and Robert De Ewas.

11 GEN.—John, the eldest son, inherited the lands of his father in Gloucestershire, and became John De Sudely, lord of Sudely and Todington. He m. Grace Tracy, daughter and heiress of Henry De Tracy, feudal lord of Barnstable, in Devonshire. They had two sons: Ralph, the heir of the father; and William, who inherited the lands of his mother, and assumed her family name of Tracy.

12 GEN.—Sir William Tracy, the second son, knight of Gloucestershire, held lands at Toddington, to the extent of one knight's fee, from his brother, Ralph De Sudely. He was one of the knights who, at the instigation of Henry II, assassinated Thomas a Becket. He died in Devonshire, and is supposed to have been buried in the parish church at Marthoe. (See Fuller's Church Hist., Hone's Every Day Book, Polwhele's Hist. of Devonshire, &c.)

13 GEN.—Sir Oliver Tracy, his oldest son and heir, was one of the knights of Gloucestershire in the time of King John, and as early as 1695 he was in possession of the estate at Barnstable.

14 GEN.—William Tracy, his son, of Toddington, was in arms against King John in 1215, and his property was confiscated; but it was restored to him by Henry III, about 1217. He m. Hawis De Born, and d. about 1224.

15 GEN.—Henry Tracy, his son and heir, of Toddington, d. about 1246, and had two sons and one daughter.

16 GEN.—Henry Tracy, of Toddington, his eldest son and heir, presented to the church at Marthoe in Devonshire in 1275.

17 GEN.—Sir William Tracy, of Toddington, his son and heir, was one of the knights of Gloucestershire in 1290, and had a command in the Scottish war. His son, 18 GEN.—William Tracy, of Toddington, was a ward of Lawrence Tresham in 1300. He was one of the knights of Gloucestershire, and was sheriff for five years, commencing in 1324. In 1313 he was elected to parliament as one of the knights of Gloucestershire, and again in 1321.

19 GEN.—William Tracy of Toddington, his son and heir, had a mandate to raise troops for the king, in 7th Edward III, from the county of Gloucester, &c.

20 GEN.—Sir John Tracy of Toddington, his son and heir, was in parliament as one of the knights of Gloucestershire in 1357, and was sheriff in 1368 and 1369.

21 GEN.—Sir John Tracy of Toddington, his eldest son, was a member of parliament. He was sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1378, and died in 1379.

22 GEN.—William Tracy of Toddington, his son and heir, was sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1395, and died in 1399.

23 GEN.—William Tracy of Toddington, his son and heir, was sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1418, and in 1431, was called to the privy council by King Henry the VI. He m. Alice, widow of William Gifford, and daughter and co-heiress of Sir Guy De La Spine, lord of the manor of Coughton, in Warwickshire.

23 GEN.—William Tracy of Toddington, their eldest son and heir, was sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1443, 1444 and 1450. He m. Margaret Pauncefort, daughter of Sir John Pauncefort and Margaret Beauchamp, his first wife.

25 GEN.—Henry Tracy, Esq., of Toddington, their eldest son and heir, m. Alice Baldington, daughter and co-heiress of Thomas Baldington, Esq., of Alderly, and died about 1506.

26 GEN.—Sir William Tracy of Toddington, their eldest son and heir, was sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1513. He m. Margaret Throckmorton daughter of Sir Thomas Throckmorton of Coss Court and Margaret Ordney his wife, and granddaughter of Sir John Throckmorton, who m. Eleanor, daughter and co-heiress of Sir Guy De La Spine, lord of the manor of Coughton, in Warwickshire, and died about 1531. He was one of the first who embraced the reformed religion in the time of King Henry VIII. In his will, instead of leaving his soul to God, through the intercession of the Virgin Mary and the rest of the saints, &c., according to the then common form, he stated briefly his belief as a Christian, and his hope of salvation by the grace and merits of the Saviour, and then proceeded as follows:

“As touching the wealth of my soul, the faith that I have taken and rehearsed is sufficient, as I suppose, without any other man’s works or merits. My ground and belief is that there is but one God, and one mediator between God and man, which is Jesus Christ. So that I accept none other in heaven or earth to mediate between me and God; all others to be but petitioners in receiving grace. And therefore will I bestow no part of my goods for the intent that any man shall say or do aught to help my soul. For therein I trust only to the promises of Christ: he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned.”

This will was condemned as heretical, and the testator’s body was raised and burned in 1532. He left two sons: 1. William, who was ancestor of the Viscounts Tracy of Rathcoole, in the peerage of Ireland, and of Robert Tracy, who was one of the English judges from 1700 to 1726. 2. Richard.

27 GEN.—Richard Tracy, Esq., of Stanway, the second son, was sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1559. He obtained grants of lands from the crown at Stanway and at Beckford, in that county, which had belonged to the suppressed Abbey of Tewksbury (see 1 Plow. Rep., 145). He was a man of good education; and prior to the death of Edward VI, wrote several treatises, in defence of his father’s faith; the most remarkable of which was entitled Preparations for the Cross, written in 1550. He m. Barbary Lucy, a pupil of Fox, the martyrologist, daughter of Thomas Lucy of Charlecote, in Warwickshire, and aunt of Shakespeare's Justice Shallow; and they had three sons and three daughters. He was sheriff of Gloucestershire in 1560. Barbary Lucy, his wife, was a descendant in the sixteenth generation from Hugh De Mountfort, son of Gilbert De Gaunt and Alice Mountfort, and great grandson of Baldwin V, count of Flanders, who m. Alice, daughter of Robert II, king of France. Through her ancestress, Judith, wife of Baldwin, the first count of Flanders, Barbara Lucy was descended from the Emperor Charlemagne, and through her ancestress, Alfritha, wife of Baldwin II, count of Flanders, she was descended from Alfred the Great and other Saxon kings of England.

28 GEN.—Nathaniel Tracy of Tewksbury their second son received lands from his father at that place.

29 GEN.—Lieut. Thomas Tracy of Norwich, Conn., one of his sons, b. about 1610 at Tewksbury, came to Salem, Mass., in April, 1636, where he was living in Feb., 1637. He soon after went to Wethersfield, Conn., where he m. in 1641, probably the widow of Edward Mason. He removed to Saybrook, where she probably died previous to 1659. He had by her seven children: 1. John, b. 1642. 2. Jonathan, b. about 1644. 3. Thomas, b. about 1646. 4. Miriam, b. about 1648. 5. Solomon, b. about 1651. 6. Daniel, b. 1652. 7. Samuel, b. about 1654, who died in 1693, unm. He subsequently m. two other wives, but had no issue by either. In 1645 he and Thomas Leffingwell, with others, relieved Uncas, the sachem of Mohegan, with provisions, when he was besieged at Shattuck's Point by Pessachus, sachem of the Naragansets; which led to the subsequent grant of the town of Norwich, in 1659. He and his family removed to Norwich in 1660, of which town he was one of the proprietors, and which town he represented in the general court at Hartford for about twenty sessions. He died 7 Nov., 1685.

30 GEN.—Capt. John Tracy his eldest son, was one of the original proprietors of Norwich, was a justice of the peace, and represented the town for six sessions in the legislature. He m. 17 Aug., 1670, Mary Winslow, b. 1646, daughter of Josiah Winslow and Martha Bourn of Marshfield, and niece of Gov. Edward Winslow of the Mayflower. He d. 16 Aug., 1702, at Norwich, where she d. 31 July, 1721. Four of his children were married and had families. His son, John Tracy, m. Elizabeth Leffingwell, and was father of John Tracy who m. Margaret Hyde (38); of Ruth Tracy, who m. Elijah Hyde (24); of Anne Tracy, who m. Richard Hyde (44); and of Elizabeth Tracy, who m. Samuel Backus and was mother of Elijah Backus, who m. Lucy Griswold (495), and of Anne Backus, who m. Capt. Joshua Abel (561). His son, Capt. Joseph Tracy, m. Mary Abel (100). His son, Winslow Tracy, m. Rachel Ripley, and was father of Perez Tracy, who m. Elizabeth Hyde (289). And his daughter, Elizabeth Tracy, m. Nathaniel Backus, and was grandmother of Eunice Backus, who m. James Hyde (235).

30 GEN.—Jonathan Tracy, the second son of Lieut. Thomas Tracy and his first wife, m. Mary Griswold, and had nine children. He was the ancestor of John Mason Davison, who m. Sarah Simons Walworth (4249) of Saratoga Springs. (See No. 4249.)

30 GEN.—Thomas Tracy, the third son of Lieut. Thomas Tracy and his first wife, married and had eight children, and died about 1694 at Preston, Conn.

30 GEN.—Dr. Solomon Tracy, the fourth son of Lieut. Thomas Tracy and his first wife, m. 1 Sarah Huntington, daughter of Deacon Simon Huntington the first, of Norwich, and had by her two children. He m. 2 Sarah Bliss, the widow of Thomas Sluman, and had by her one son, and d. 9 July, 1732, at Canterbury. His daughter, Lydia Tracy, m. Thomas Leffingwell. His eldest son, Simon Tracy, m. Mary Leffingwell, and was father of Deacon Simon Tracy, who m. Elizabeth Hyde (61), and grandfather of Mundator Tracy, who m. Caroline Bushnell (2131). His youngest son, Solomon Tracy, married and settled at Canterbury, and had eight children.

30 GEN.—Daniel Tracy, the fifth son of Lieut. Thomas Tracy and his first wife, m. 1 Abigail Adgate, eldest daughter of Deacon Thomas Adgate and his second wife, Mary (Marvin) Bushnell, and had by her one son, Daniel Tracy, who m. Abigail Leffingwell; 2 the widow Hannah (Backus) Bingham, and had by her two other children, who died s. p. He was killed 29 June, 1728, by the falling of a bridge at Norwich Landing which he was assisting in raising.

30 GEN.—Miriam Tracy, the only daughter of Lieut. Thomas Tracy and his first wife, m. Lieut. Thomas Waterman one of the original proprietors of Norwich, son of Robert Waterman and Elizabeth Bourn of Marshfield. She had by him eight children, seven of whom married and had families. Thomas Waterman, her eldest son, m. Elizabeth Allyn, and was the father of John Waterman, who m. Anne Waterman, her youngest daughter, m. Josiah De Wolf of Lyme.

THE LATE MRS. WALWORTH.

(See No. 1339.)

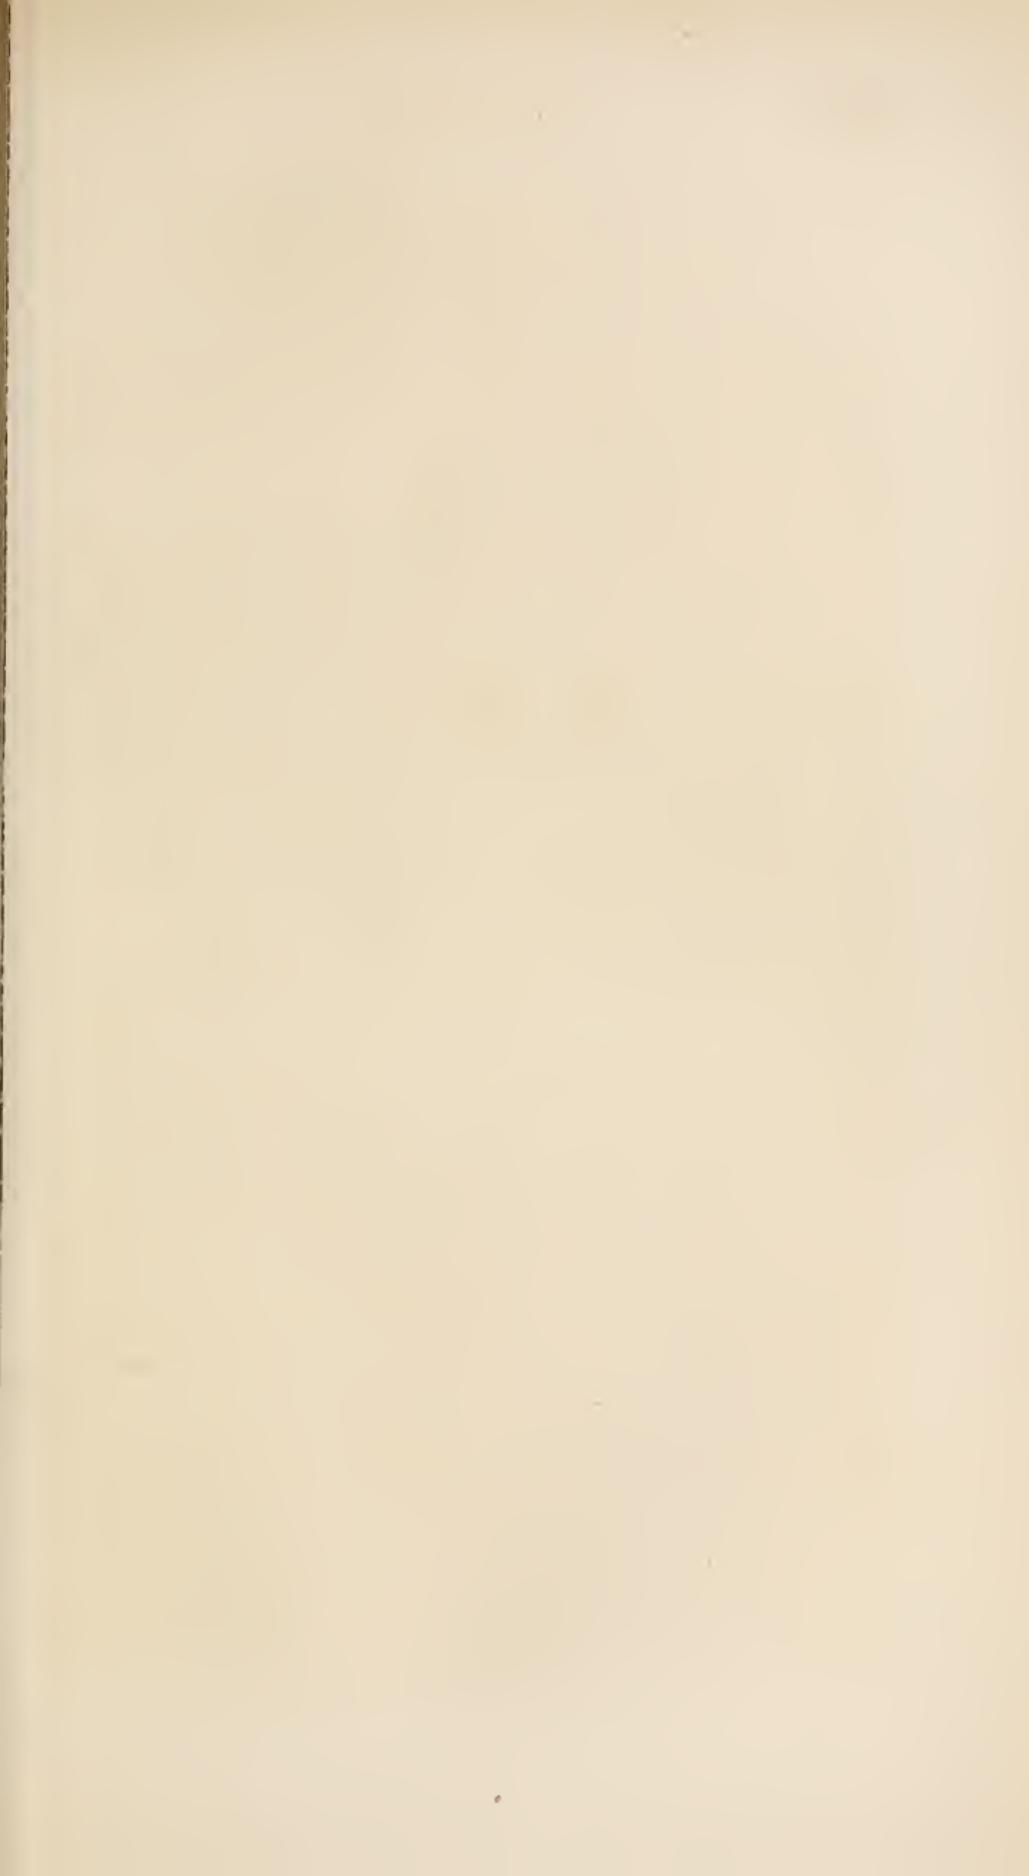

The death of this good woman has stricken with deep grief the hearts of many who were connected with her by the ties of consanguinity, and spread gloom and sorrow far beyond the limits of the domestic circle in which she moved so long, and within which she was loved so well.

She expired on the 24th ult., at Saratoga Springs, where she had resided many years, in the well-known mansion of the Chancellor, and surrounded by the members of her tender and affectionate family. To them the loss will prove irreparable, and many, very many, of the inhabitants of that village will long and sincerely mourn the departure of one who was always their friend, in sunshine and in storm, in sickness and in health.

Mrs. Walworth was an eminently pious and estimable woman. She was one of those women in whom are found combined all those charming qualities which constitute the affectionate wife, the tender mother, the true friend, and the sincere Christian. Those who knew her best learned to love her most. It was her good fortune to be placed in a situation which enabled her to gratify the natural benevolence of her heart, and that served to develop those beautiful traits of character that shone so brightly about her path, and clearly marked her footsteps through a long and useful life. She failed not to render thanks to her God for all His goodness, and ever strove earnestly to make a good use of the blessings He showered upon her so bountifully.

While she never neglected any of the multifarious duties that devolved upon her in her relations of wife and mother, but discharged them all faithfully and well, yet she ever found time to go about doing good, in meek imitation of Him whom she loved and served; and she was always ready to listen to the cry of the needy and to obey with alacrity the disinterested promptings of her generous nature. Among the poor and the afflicted she moved as a ministering angel, carrying with her timely relief, and bestowing upon those who needed it such Christian counsel and consolation as made the faint heart strong, even in the grasp of the Destroyer, and caused the star of Hope Eternal to shine brighter and brighter as the sufferer's hold on life grew weaker and weaker. Her kind heart beat in unison with all the cares and trials of the worthy of her fellow beings, and, in doing what she could to alleviate them, she drew no line of distinction between rich and poor, high and humble, but dispensed her charities and exercised her benevolence with an even hand, and with a single eye to the accomplishment of good.

Those stricken ones who mourn the loss of a faithful wife and a fond mother, will long continue to feel keenly the bitter pangs of such a bereavement, and cherish her memory in their hearts while life endures. But there are many who, with the writer of this feeble testimonial to her superior worth, will ever remember her for her numberless acts of kind, full-hearted benevolence; for her uniform evenness of temper and never-failing amiability; for her beautifully consistent character; for her open-handed charities to the needy, her tender care of the sick, and her sleepless watchfulness at the bed of death.

God blessed her for the discharge of all these kind offices while she lived, and now, in His own good time, He has summoned her away to the enjoyment of the Christian's priceless reward—eternal life.

The following was traced by the pen of affection, and is inscribed upon her tombstone in the Green Ridge cemetery at Saratoga Springs:

“She loved her Savior, and that love she proved,
By ardent love for all the Savior loved.
She loved his poor: she prayed, and freely gave,
To save the dying world He died to save.”

LIEUT. GEORGE AUGUSTUS WOODRUFF.

(See No. 2935.†)

Mortally wounded on the battle-field of Gettysburgh, Pa., on the 3d and died on the 4th day of July, 1863, Lieut. George Augustus Woodruff, U. S. A., son of George and Augusta S. Woodruff of Marshall, Mich., aged 23 years.

Lieut. Woodruff graduated at the U. S. military academy at West Point in May, 1861, with a high grade of scholarship, and with the general esteem of his class. He was one of the number of promising young officers who within the past three years have gone forth from the academy to various positions in the federal army, and whose merits and services, whenever fully and impartially recorded, will not only render their names precious to every true patriot, but will also reflect the highest honor on that noble institution which has enabled them to exhibit a conduct equal to their courage.

His standing being such as to give him a position in the ordnance, he nevertheless preferred the more active service of the artillery. In the first instance, however, he was ordered to the army of the Potomac and to the position of assistant adjutant-general to Colonel and acting Brigadier-General Wilcox of Michigan; and took part in the first battle of Bull Run in that capacity, and was engaged upon the most exposed portions of the field and in the thickest of the fight, retiring in company with the regulars who brought up the rear.

Immediately after this he was promoted to a first lieutenancy, and at his own request was assigned to his proper place in the artillery of the regular army; being attached to what was then known as Rickett's Battery, so much distinguished by its bravery, and its almost complete destruction while doing its duty at a late battle in which its heroic commander was wounded and captured. With this battery he continued to the end of his life, and to him is due no minor share of the credit reflected on its officers by its wonderful drill, and discipline, and consequent efficiency. Under his immediate command, for a large share of the time, it held from August, 1861, to the June following, the important pass of Edward's Ferry, exhibiting, upon occasion, a skill which seemed to the observers scarcely less than marvelous, in dislodging the enemy from his dangerous lurking places upon the Virginia side of the Potomac.

In June, 1862, he moved down with his battery to the Peninsula. His first important action was at the battle of Fair Oaks, where the battery performed a distinguished part. Gen. Richardson, who was then present, thus states the crisis of the action: "One and a half hours before sunset, just as Couch's division were having their left turned, the enemy penetrated between him and the corps of Heintzleman. Half an hour would have cut our column in two, which would have insured the defeat of our army."

Within this half hour the division of Gen. Sedgwick, led by this battery, at quick time, came up; and to its rapid and well directed fire, staggering the enemy's advancing column and preparing the way for the gallant charge led by Gen. Sedgwick in person, more than to any other human cause, the result of the battle was due.

Gen. Sedgwick, in his official report of that action, thus refers to the incident: "I would here mention with pride, that shortly previous to the charge, Lieut. Kirby brought his battery into action in a most gallant and spirited manner. His pieces, in charge of Lieuts. Woodruff and French, were run up and unlimbered, under a very galling discharge of musketry, within less than one hundred yards of the enemy; and opened a terrific fire with cannister and spherical case, which contributed, in a very high degree to break and finally scatter him."

The battery was also engaged in two of the battles during the seven days' fight before Richmond, in which it was of great service. And in order to contribute his utmost to the rescue of our army at this time, Lieut. Woodruff deferred yielding to an attack of billious fever till the movement was ended, when he was obliged to succumb and to remain very seriously sick for many weeks. But he recovered his strength sufficiently to rejoin his battery just on the eve of the battle of Antietam, where, in consequence of the sickness and absence of Lieut. Kirby, the command devolved upon him. The able manner in which he disposed his force and handled his guns upon this occasion, while for a time deserted by his infantry supports, saving by his prompt and judicious action half a mile of our line, and contributing largely to the general success of our arms, was graphically, though somewhat inaccurately depicted in the Baltimore American soon after; and was such as to call forth the personal compliments of Gen. McClellan. Gen. Sedgwick, the division commander, being disabled early in the action, made no report of this affair. But in a letter to the father of Lieut. Woodruff thus alludes to it: "At the battle of Antietam I again had occasion to notice your son's gallantry, then in command of his battery. Whilst leaving the field, my horse having been killed and myself badly wounded, I was left for some time within the battery, which was then engaged in repulsing, and did repulse, the column of the enemy that had broken my division. No veteran could have selected a better position, and no one could have shown more gallantry in defending it."

At the battle of Fredericksburgh this battery was among those ordered across the river, and the section commanded by Lieut. Woodruff, the only portion that was so, was engaged for a time with the enemy. Again at Chancellorville, the battery occupied a prominent position; and it was here that Lieut. Kirby received the wound which resulted in his death soon after. The command now again devolved upon Lieut. Woodruff, which command he held in all subsequent engagements till death severed the connection.

The next and last action, or rather series of actions, in which he was engaged were those ever memorable ones at Gettysburgh on the 2d and 3d of July, 1863. On the 2d, the battery was engaged in four artillery fights and in one battle. And on the 3d, it was engaged in eight artillery fights and in one battle before 1 o'clock P. M.; when, in the words of a brother officer, an eye-witness and participator in the scene, addressed to the father of Lieut. Woodruff, "the most tarrific battle of the war opened. For an hour and a half your son's and three other batteries bore the concentrated fire of one hundred and fifty guns. Then the rebel infantry moved forward to attack in front of the batteries. Our front was soon cleared, and George rode up and ordered me to go with two guns to the support of the other batteries, which were in danger of being taken. He was turning to go to the rest of the battery, when a musket ball struck him on the right of the spine issuing near the lower rib."

This proved to be a mortal wound, and which he seems to have felt to be such. Upon being helped to dismount, he extended his hand to his friend, and next in command, Lieut. Egan, and bade him good-bye. He survived, however, till the next day, bearing the pain of his deadly wound without a groan or a murmur; his dying moments being soothed by the kind care of his surgeon and the affectionate attentions of his brother officers and men, and by the consciousness of having discharged the highest duty a human being can perform, and more than all, as we humbly trust, by that Christian faith in which he had been trained from infancy, and from which, in his manhood, he did not depart.

Though still only a lieutenant in the regular army, his merit had been recognized on the field by recommendation for a captain brevet at Fair Oaks, and subsequently at other actions on the peninsula for those of major and lieutenant-colonel.

He was buried by his companions in arms on the field where he had fought so well; and where he expressed a wish that he might be laid. But his remains were shortly afterwards removed to the rural cemetery of his native town, and placed beside those of his beloved mother, who had preceded him to the spirit land less than a month before. She being taken away suddenly from the evil to come, and he, as it since appears, without ever learning, though repeatedly written to respecting it, the bitter news of her death. Heaven thus kindly shielding each from the crushing sorrow.

Thus has gone another precious sacrifice to the fell spirit of this unnatural rebellion. Another witness before the judgment seat against those at whose door lies the guilt of this fearful strife.

Inscrutable, indeed, are the doings of Him who so often calls away the young just entering upon the active stage of life, matured for its duties and enjoyments, appearing on it only long enough to inspire proud hopes of their brilliant success, and then suddenly withdrawn. Yet of all the victims which death has gathered in this cruel war, there has fallen none whose character had a juster claim to respect and admiration. Truth, duty and kindness were the elements out of which it grew; and no nobler illustration of each could be found in all the patriot host gathered with him to the defence of the government and the preservation of the Union. The temptation and license of the camp never betrayed him to forgetfulness of a faithful mother's teachings. A brother officer, who knew him long and well, speaks of him thus: "For three years we were hourly companions at the military academy, and since I have been in service he was my model and guide; and I can truly tell you I know of no virtue he wanted or one vice that he possessed." But pure, good and dear as he was — a most dutiful son, an affectionate brother, devoted friend, true patriot and soldier — he has gone, as we may humbly hope, where Christian heroes and martyrs have gone before him. His work was done, and he has departed a victor and conqueror from the battle-field of life.

MAJOR-GENERAL JOHN SEDGWICK,

(See No. 3096.)

Was b. 13 Sept., 1813, at Cornwall, Conn., and was a grand nephew of Judge Theodore Sedgwick of Stockbridge, who was a judge of the supreme court of Massachusetts. He was a descendant of the eighth generation from Major-General Robert Sedgwick of Charlestown, Mass., one of the first settlers of that town, who "was nursed up in London's artillery garden, and was stout and active in all feats of war." That descent was as follows: 1. William, the second son of Major-Gen. Robert Sedgwick, m. Elizabeth Stone of Hartford. 2. Samuel Sedgwick, their only child, m. Mary Hopkins, and had twelve children. 3. Benjamin Sedgwick, their youngest son, m. Anne Thompson, and had six children. 4. Gen. John Sedgwick of Cornwall, their eldest son, m. Abigail Andrews and had twelve children. 5. Benjamin Sedgwick, their fourth son, m. Olive Collins, and was the father of Major-Gen. John Sedgwick.

John Doyrich

John Sedgwick graduated at the West Point military academy in 1837, and was appointed 1 July, 1837, a second lieutenant of artillery, and promoted to a first lieutenantcy in 1839. He was in the battles of Contreras and Churubusco in Mexico, in August, 1847; and received a captain's brevet for his gallantry there. He was again honorably mentioned in Gen. Worth's report of the bloody battle of Molino del Rey, on the 8th of September, 1847. For his gallantry on that occasion, and at the taking of Chapultapec, and the San Cosmo gate of the city of Mexico, five days later, he received the brevet of a major. In 1849 he was appointed a captain, and in 1855 he was made a major of the first regiment of cavalry. On the 25th of April, 1861, he was appointed colonel of the fourth regiment of cavalry in the regular army, and on the 31st of August, the same year, he was made a brigadier-general of volunteers. In the battles near Richmond, in June and July, 1862, he commanded a division in Gen. Sumner's army corps. And on the 4th of July, 1862, he was appointed a major-general of volunteers. He was severely wounded at the sanguinary battle of Antietam, in Maryland, 17th September, 1862; and upon his recovery he was assigned to the command of the ninth army corps in the army of the Potomac. And by hard fighting and good generalship he saved his army corps from destruction near Fredericksburgh in May, 1863, after the disastrous defeat of General Hooker at Chancellorville had left that army corps to sustain the attack of the massed forces of the rebel army. And he arrived at Gettysburgh, with the sixth army corps under his command, in time to participate in the latter part of the sanguinary conflict which was carried on there the three first days of July, 1863.

Again, on the 7th Nov., 1863, with the fifth and sixth army corps under his command, he surprised and captured a strong position of the confederates on the north side of the Rappahannock river in Virginia, near the Rappahannock Station, and took about 1500 prisoners. And he and his troops were complimented in general orders by General Mead, the commander of the army of the Potomac, for this gallant exploit; in which about 400 of his command were killed and wounded.

F.

TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF THE LATE JOHN PORTER, ESQ.

(See No. 7360.)

In addressing the supreme judicial court at Exeter, N. H., Judge Stickney said :

The bar in the county of Rockingham has been called within a few years to part with many of its valued members. Mr. Porter, who for a long time occupied a prominent position among us, and whose death has just been announced to the court, is now added to this number, and we are called upon to pay a tribute of respect to his memory.

Few men have left behind them a more enviable reputation than Mr. Porter. In all the stations of life which he was called to fill, and they were numerous, he fully met the public expectation, and performed his duties with marked ability and success. His attainments in the profession to which he devoted himself, were of a high order. As a sound lawyer and safe counsellor he was among the first of the profession, and for integrity of character and honesty of purpose he had no superior. I remember him well thirty years ago, when I first became a member of the bar in this county; he was then in the full and successful practice of his profession. I remember also his associates and competitors at that time—Mason, Sullivan, Bartlett, and others, eminent in the profession—and it is no small praise to him to say, that among such men he maintained a high reputation as a lawyer, and his counsel and services were much sought after and relied upon.

I have been engaged with him and against him in the trial of cases; and any one thus situated could not fail to observe and acknowledge his superior ability and carefulness in the preparation and management of his cases. He was distinguished for the accuracy and soundness of his judgment, and for his extensive knowledge of the law and its practice. As a special pleader he stood in the front rank of the profession, at a time when special pleading was more regarded in practice than at the present day. His manner in court was peculiarly unassuming. Nothing was ever said by him for the mere purpose of display; but he stated his positions distinctly, in language clear and concise, and he seldom had occasion to restate them. In his manners and deportment he was uniformly gentlemanly, kind and courteous to all; nothing assuming, overbearing or offensive, ever came from him. He was particularly kind to the younger members of the bar, and was ever ready and happy to advise and aid them, when requested, in matters of practice. I often had occasion to avail myself of this superior knowledge and experience in the early years of my practice, and no man ever rendered such aid more willingly or more cheerfully.

His social qualities were of a high order; as a man and a friend he was kind and obliging; in his domestic relations he was singularly happy; as a husband and father he was kind and affectionate, and was greatly beloved in return. But the most prominent trait in his character, and the one which gave value to all the rest, was his sterling integrity—his honesty and uprightness in all his transactions and in all the relations of life. No man stood higher in these respects or enjoyed in a greater degree the confidence and respect of the community where he lived.

His earthly course is now ended; he has passed through a long life unsullied, and has gone to another world, where, I trust, he received the welcome of the good and faithful servant.

G.

MAJOR-GENERAL JOHN POPE.

(No. 6117.†)

Was the third son of Judge Nathaniel Pope of Kaskaskia, Ill., formerly of Kentucky, and was, through his maternal grandmother, Lucretia Hubbard of New London, Conn., descended from Gov. Leverett of Mass., and from the Rev. William Hubbard of Ipswich, the historian of New England. Through his maternal ancestress, Mabel Harlakenden, the second wife of Gov. Haynes of Hartford, he was also descended from Alfred the Great, from William the Conqueror, from the earls of Warwick and the earls of Stafford, and from other kings and other nobility of England. (See Nos. 2139, 7038, and Appendix A.)

He graduated at West Point military academy in 1842, and was appointed a second lieutenant in the corps of topographical engineers. He was at the taking of Monterey, in Mexico, in September, 1846, by the troops under Gen. Taylor; and was promoted to a first lieutenancy, his commission to date from the 23d of Sept., 1846. He was at the battle of Buena Vista in February, 1847, and for his services there received the brevet rank of captain. He was subsequently employed to test the feasibility of supplying water on the arid plains between Texas and New Mexico by means of Artesian wells. In July, 1856, he was promoted to the full rank of captain of topographical engineers; and held that office in Feb., 1861, when he was detailed as one of the officers to conduct the president elect to the seat of government at Washington.

On the 17th of May, 1861, after the commencement of the civil war, he was appointed a brigadier-general of volunteers, by President Lincoln, and was assigned to a command in Missouri, and was at the battle of Blackwater. In March, 1862, he was appointed a major-general of volunteers; was assigned the command of the troops in Missouri, who were to co-operate with the flotilla under the command of Capt. Foote of the navy, in reducing the confederate works at Island No. 10 in the Mississippi river, near New Madrid. He marched to New Madrid and captured it, on the 14 March, 1862. A canal was subsequently cut through the inundated forest on the Missouri side of the river; by means of which Gen. Pope's troops were enabled to cross the Mississippi in transports, so as to get in the rear of the confederate batteries on the opposite side of the river. This having been accomplished on the 7th of April, by a division of Gen. Pope's troops, under the command of Gen. Paine, the troops on the island surrendered to Capt. Foote on the night of the 7th of April. And Gen. Pope's land forces the next day succeeded in capturing several thousand of the confederate troops on the Tennessee side of the river. He was appointed brigadier-general of volunteers on the 21 March, 1862.

In April, 1862, after the battle of Shiloh, when Gen. Halleck arrived upon the ground where that battle had been fought, he found Gen. Grant's army much reduced; and called to him Gen. Pope, and all his forces, from the neighborhood of New Madrid and Fort Pillow, and placed him and his corps on the left wing of the army which was to advance upon the confederate stronghold at Corinth. The march commenced on the 27th of April, and between that and the 16th of May there were frequent skirmishes with the enemy. And there were two sharp engagements at and around Farmington, a few miles east of Corinth, in which Gen. Pope's division was prominent. The siege of Corinth commenced on the 20th of May, 1862. On the 28 of May the left wing of the army, under General Pope, attacked what afterwards was found to be the most important part of the confederate works; which attack was most vigorously resisted. The next day Gen. Pope opened upon that part of the defences of Corinth with heavy artillery, when the confederates retired from the battery and allowed him to occupy the position which they had so vigorously defended the day before; and before daylight on the morning of the 30th of May the last of the confederate army retired from their works, and the siege of Corinth was ended.

In June, 1862, he was summoned to Washington to take the command of the army of Virginia, after Gen. Jackson of the confederate army had compelled Gen. Banks to retreat from Winchester into Maryland, had defeated Gen. Shields at Port Republic, and had compelled Gen. Fremont to retire before him. He was made a brigadier-general of the regular army on the 14th of July, 1862, and assumed the command of the army of Virginia, and marched towards Richmond, and arrived at Culpepper Court House, a few miles north of the Rapidan river, early in August. On the 8th of August, 1862, on hearing that the confederates had crossed the Rapidan in force, he sent forward Gen. Banks, with two divisions, to hold them in check. On the 9th Banks advanced to the neighborhood of the Cedar Mountain, about half way between Culpepper Court House and the Rapidan. A desperate conflict here ensued, in which many were killed and wounded on both sides; but in which the Union forces were eventually worsted, owing to the strong position of the confederates.

Gen. Pope, with the army of Virginia, remained near Culpepper Court House until the 17th of August, when he learned that the confederate army, under Gen. Robert E. Lee, was only a few miles in front of him, in overwhelming force. He therefore fell back and recrossed the Rappahannock, and prepared to defend the passage of that river by the confederates, at the Rappahannock Station, on the Orange and Alexandria railroad, and at the numerous fords above and below that place. He received orders from Washington to hold the line of the Upper Rappahannock until the troops of Gen. McClellan, which were being brought around from Harrison's Landing and up the Potomac, could arrive and march to his assistance. And for several days there was continuous fighting in his front, along the river, from the Rappahannock Station northward; in which the apparent efforts of the confederates to cross the river were frustrated.

But it afterwards appeared that these demonstrations in front of Gen. Pope's army were only intended to mask a movement of the confederate general, Stonewall Jackson, in great force, through Thoroughfare Gap in the Bull Run mountains, and thence to the Manassas Junction, in the rear of the Union army. On the night of the 22 of August, in the midst of a terrific thunder storm, a body of Gen. Jackson's cavalry, under the command of Gen. Stewart, made a bold and successful dash across the country to Catlett's Station, immediately in the rear of Gen. Pope, and plundered a valuable train; getting possession of the baggage and private property of the general.

On the 23d of August Gen. Pope had fallen back upon Warrenton, and was reinforced by a portion of Gen. McClellan's army, under Generals Heintzleman and Fitz John Porter. Gen. Jackson, on the 24th and 25th of August, proceeded northward, through Thoroughfare Gap, and marched directly for Centreville. On the 26th his cavalry fell suddenly upon the Union force at Manassas Junction, capturing a battery of artillery and a large amount of military stores, and the works at that place were immediately occupied by the confederates, in force. And the next day a brigade of Gen. McClellan's army from Alexandria, which was proceeding to reinforce Gen. Pope, arrived at the junction by rail road, without being aware of the presence of the enemy, and was driven back by the confederates, beyond Centreville, with heavy loss.

When Gen. Pope ascertained that the confederates were in his rear, and that his communication with his base of supplies was cut off, he decided that the defence of the upper Rappahannock must be abandoned. And on the 27th of August he evacuated Warrenton and Warrenton Junction; directing Gen. McDowell with his own corps, and Sigel's corps, and Reynold's division, to march rapidly upon Gainesville, so as to intercept any reinforcements coming to Gen. Jackson through Thoroughfare Gap. He also directed Generals Reno and Kearny, with their divisions, to march on Greenwich, in the rear of Gainesville, to support Gen. McDowell. And Gen. Pope himself, with Gen. Porter's corps and Hooker's division, proceeded towards Manassas Junction. Gen. Hooker, on the afternoon of the same day, came upon the confederate advance, under Gen. Ewell, and after a severe conflict drove them back on Manassas Junction. In the meantime, Gen. McDowell presented so threatening a front, that Gen. Longstreet, who had passed through Thoroughfare Gap with reinforcements for Gen. Jackson, deemed it prudent to fall back to the west side of the Bull Run mountains.

On the morning of the 28th of August Gen. Jackson evacuated Manassas Junction, and passing through Centreville, took the Warrenton turnpike towards Gainesville. And Gen. Pope, with the divisions of Hooker and Reno and Kearney, pushed on to Manassas and Centreville; sending orders for Gen. Porter to hasten up from Broad Run, where he had stopped. On the 29th of August most of the troops, belonging to the Union army were engaged in a sanguinary conflict with the confederates, in which very little advantage was gained on either side. The conflict was terminated by the approach of darkness; and both parties, exhausted by the fatigues of the day, lay upon their arms, ready to renew the battle on the morrow; the Union army having nearly exhausted its provisions and forage.

The conflict was renewed about one o'clock in the afternoon of the 30th of August, and the fighting soon became general along the whole line of the Union army; Heintzleman occupying the extreme right, McDowell the extreme left, and Sigel, Porter and Reno being posted in the centre. And by four o'clock in the afternoon the whole of Gen. Pope's forces in the field were engaged at close quarters with the enemy. About five o'clock in the afternoon, Gen. Lee pushed forwards immense masses of troops against the Union left and centre, and the conflict became terrific along those portions of the line. The Union left at length gave way, and at nightfall had been forced back half a mile. And Gen. Pope finding it useless to contend longer with superior numbers and in the exhausted condition of his troops, retired across Bull Run to the heights of Centreville. Some fighting afterwards took place on the evening of the 1st of September, in which Generals Kearney and Stevens were killed. On the afternoon of the 2d of September, in pursuance of orders from the commander in chief, Gen. Halleck, the troops under the command of Gen. Pope retreated within the defences of Washington, and arrived there without further loss on the 3d of September; when Gen. Pope was relieved of his command of the army of Virginia.

He was then assigned to the department of the northwest, where he soon succeeded in putting an end to the outrages which the Indians in Minnesota had been committing upon the frontier inhabitants of that state.

H.

SUSAN TRACY BAGG,

(See No. 6860.†)

Widow of the late Moses Bagg of Utica, was the daughter of William Gedney Tracy and Rachel (Huntington) Tracy of Whitesborough. She was born Nov. 20, 1800. For many years she had resided in Utica, and she removed thence to New York in the year 1856, where she continued to reside until her death, July 17, 1859.

For nearly two years she had been in feeble health, and had accustomed herself to look forward to a sudden termination of her life. Early in July she was induced to go to Saratoga Springs, in the hope that their curative waters, in connection with medical treatment, might alleviate some of the symptoms of her disease. Their effect seemed favorable, and gave her friends some reason to expect her restoration to comfortable health, until on Friday, the 15th, when apoplectic symptoms were exhibited. She retained her consciousness long enough calmly to foresee their result, and then sank rapidly until on Sunday morning, at eleven o'clock, she slept in peace.

Her remains were buried just at sunset in the Forest Hill cemetery, near Utica, in a lot selected by herself, and where the remains of her husband's family had been laid. She had been present at the consecration of its beautiful grounds, and had then heard, as part of the dedicatory exercises, an ode written by herself, sung by the thousands present, to most of whom she was known. One verse of it was vividly recalled to the memory of the friends who were paying the last token of their respect to her remains, by the hour and circumstances—

“The evening sun upon this hill
Bestows its latest ray,
And promises another dawn
At every parting day.
Bright emblem of the blessed hope
By God to mortals given,
That closing life upon this earth
Precedes the dawn of Heaven.”

Her former pastor, the Rev. Dr. Philemon H. Fowler, of the First Presbyterian church in Utica paid this well deserved tribute to the memory of her virtues.

Mrs. Bagg united a number and a variety of excellencies which few of us can find elsewhere in the circle of our acquaintances. Strength and delicacy, fervor of feeling and coolness of judgment, the nicest susceptibilty and perception, and the utmost energy and resolution, combined to give completeness to her character.

Though endowed by nature with the qualities that win affection and inspire respect, it was from grace that her crowning beauty and attraction came. Preëminent among her Christian charms was the benevolence she cherished and practiced. Usefulness was the end of her life. In every relation and in every sphere she merged herself in others. In the family, where we all most act ourselves, and where no disguises are kept up, and where our freest and fullest developments are made, she appeared almost unconscious of her own interests and wants, in an engrossing regard to her kindred, whom she constantly served.

There are three positions in the community with which my mind most readily associates her. They may be judged humble by the world, and we may have thought her condescending in taking them; but her usefulness there gave them dignity and honor. The one is as a member of a sewing society, where, by her presence and example, she encouraged charity to the poor; the second is as a teacher in a mission Sunday school, where she long and faithfully and successfully taught the neglected children of parents of foreign birth; the third is as the principal directress of an orphan asylum, where for so many years she watched over motherless childhood with maternal tenderness and assiduity.

With a well poised, well disciplined and well informed mind ; with a delicate and cultivated taste ; with ardent and disinterested affection and unflagging zeal, she so admirably acted her part, that as a counselor and helper we looked upon her as indispensable in the household, in society, and in the church.

When her anticipated removal from Utica was first announced, our feelings would have forbidden her leaving ; and when we yielded to the Providence that called her away, we rejoiced that the great metropolis to which she went was a wider theatre for those labors of love in which she so much delighted, and for which she was so eminently fitted. Scarcely, however, had she reached her new home, before sickness arrested her untired activity.

During her welcome visit here, in the summer of 1858, it was painfully evident that her vigorous constitution began to be undermined : and though she subsequently rallied somewhat, she never ceased to believe that sentence of death was written upon her. There was a marked increase in the spirituality of her frame, and in the zest with which she relished divine things. She left New York for Saratoga, to gratify her friends, rather than with any expectation of improvement. She wrote to one of her brothers at the time : " I am deeply impressed with the call which I have had, to be prepared at any moment to leave all the things of this life ; and I rejoice always in the blessed promise of the life to come."

The physician whose care she enjoyed at Saratoga was a Luke indeed ; and under his ministries, and those of a cultivated and pious matron who assisted him, and in the society of a Christian household, who made her resort even less a sanitarium than a home, she spent a few days most agreeably, and with an apparent amendment in health. Suddenly, however, a new shock of disease fell upon her, and she was borne from a cheerful circle to a couch of languishment where, in a few hours, she fell asleep in Jesus.

JONATHAN HYDE.

(See No. 767.)

The following notice of the late Jonathan Hyde of Bath, Me., is from The Northern Tribune of the 30th of November, 1850 :

" He who lives a great truth is incomparably greater than he who but speaks it."

The late Jonathan Hyde, whose demise has already been noticed, has for over fifty years exhibited before this community the great truth of a consistent human life in a degree of perfection rarely to be met with. Through his long period of active life we have beheld him from day to day, and year to year, steadily, but without ostentation, fulfilling the obligations of a good citizen, and in all relations of life presenting to those about him a character the most exemplary.

At length, in mature times, the curtain has fallen; the drama of a long and useful earthly life has ended, that scenes of a brighter character may be opened above, and, in grateful acknowledgment of the gentle hand of Providence, which has closed the earthly scene, we are left to profound musings, in view of the picture which retrospective thoughts gradually bring to the mind.

"The honest man is truly the noblest work of God." He is a gift from heaven to earth; and the long life of such an one, in however humble walk, must present to his generation, and may to the generation following, a volume of instruction more cogent in its influence on cotemporaries than many abstract disquisitions on Christian ethics.

Ordinarily we are given to the glorification of quite different traits of human life and character,—a few flashes of brilliant earthly wit, an heroic display of the daring, even though it be sanguinary and more barbarous than Christian,—a successful career of mere money getting and property managing to the attainment of vast accumulations, with, perhaps, few if any of the qualities which form an example worthy to be presented to the rising generation of a Christian people; or, the extraordinary development of some other trait of character, while the numerous others, essential to constitute a symmetrical and well-balanced man, have been left hardly cultivated at all. To these and similar distorted pictures of human life is the admiration of the young invited, while the examples of a more modest but perfect character are less noticed.

But, examples of practical life and character like the one before us, though they speak in gentle tones, they address themselves to the conscience and to the whole moral sense of our better nature, and should be regarded as among the choicest bounties of heaven, not to be passed by unheeded, or soon forgotten.

Mr. Hyde was the son of a farmer in Lebanon, Ct., which place he left in the year 1792, at the age of 20 years, and made his first trip to the Kennebec for the improvement of his health. Realizing the benefit sought, he continued his visits at intervals, passing most of his time, while on the river, either at the settlement near Jones's Eddy in Georgetown, or at Pownalboro', now Dresden, which were then the principal seats of commerce on the Kennebec, and spending his winters, more or less, in teaching school in his native state, until 1799, when he established himself at Bath, and opened a store for retail trade.

Prudently confining himself to his means, which were limited, and gradually extending his business, as his ability increased and the wants of the place demanded, he progressively advanced to circumstances which, previous to and after the last war with England, permitted him to engage in foreign trade without prejudice to his vending business. But more recently, as is well known, he has given his attention mostly to the importation and vending of iron, steel, &c.; gradually bringing his earthly concerns into a condition to be left whenever his course might terminate.

His steady habits, moral deportment, and manifest respect for civil and religious order, early drew towards him confiding popular sentiment, which soon commanded his services as a select man of the town, over which board of officers he presided many years, and also frequently represented the town in the state legislature during the connection of Maine with Massachusetts; and for twelve years, embracing some of the most trying times in a financial point of view which the country has experienced since the commencement of the present century, he acted as president of the Lincoln bank.

Thus, with an even tenor, and more and more interior and expansive views and purposes, he was permitted to complete the full period of human life to the age of 78 years, when, Oct. 18, 1850, with an humble faith in the Lord, he was indulged with a quiet exit, which seemed peculiarly in keeping with his whole character.

Through his whole life, the honest man was apparent in all his transactions.

Punctual to an extraordinary degree, his obligations were often met before they reached maturity, and, though a large and lenient creditor, he seldom himself really owed to any one aught but goodwill.

His hospitality, though not ostentatious, was hearty, and his house was ever open to a large circle of friends, while the worthy poor were not knowingly turned empty away.

He was the truly polite man, for his habitual disesteem of himself and regard for the feelings of others constrained him ever to treat them with due consideration; and he was also cautious of prejudging in a case involving personal interest, seldom allowing himself to speak to the disadvantage of any one.

A seemingly constitutional truthfulness pervaded his whole life, and even his figures, as well as his judgment, were seldom found to be incorrect.

Though he never became "a professor of religion," in the general acceptance of the term, his whole life was practically such a profession. Few persons rendered a more constant attendance on divine worship, or more cheerful and reliable support to religious and benevolent institutions and charity; amongst the latter of which the American colonization society shared largely of his zeal and bounty.

The circumstances which may have operated to restrain him from the formal profession of religion and a local connection with the church were, probably, his extreme diffidence of his personal goodness, and by his great caution of professing a belief in any system of faith in which he could not fully concur.

Though in politics, as in other matters, he was staunchly conservative, he was not backward to adopt new measures when their wisdom could be clearly shown; and he was one of the most prompt to forward and patronize every sound scheme of public improvement.

Moderation and steadiness were notorious characteristics of his whole life, and these traits, combined with promptness of action, industry and frugality, as will ever be the case, enabled him, without a strong love of property for its own sake, to avoid those revulsions in his business so common to commercial men, and to secure a competency for the use of his family.

Such were a few of the exemplary traits in the character and history of our departed friend.

Explanation of Abbreviations, &c., used in the Genealogy.

bap., baptized.	b., born.
d., died.	m., married.
s. p., sine prole, without issue.
unm., unmarried.	unn., unnamed.

† Indicates that further particulars of, and the children &c. of the descendant of William Hyde against whose name it is placed, will be found in a subsequent part of the genealogy, in the proper place according to the individual number of such descendant.

EXPLANATION OF THE INDEX.

The descendants of William Hyde, to the seventh generation inclusive, with very few exceptions, are in this genealogy numbered successively, in each generation; so that each descendant has his or her individual number. The male children of the same parents, in the numbering of those generations, are first numbered; in the order of their births, before the females; and then the female children of the same parents are numbered, in the order of their births. And such descendants will be found in their proper places in the genealogy, by the numbers set opposite their respective names in the index.

To render the indexing of the descendants more convenient, those having the family names, respectively, of the ten families which were the most numerous, are indexed by themselves; in the first ten parts of the index. And all those having other family names will be found in Part XI of the index. The ten families which are thus indexed separately, are 1, Hyde; 2, Lord; 3, Griswold; 4, Abel; 5, Tracy; 6, Sill; 7, Huntington; 8, Dorr; 9, Rogers; and 10, Ely.

In the first ten parts of the index, the descendants of William Hyde are indexed alphabetically according to the Christian names. But in Part XI of the index, they are arranged alphabetically, according to the family names; and those having the same family name, are also generally arranged alphabetically, according to the initial letters of the Christian name.

Thus: to find Clarina Griswold, the wife of Nathan Elliot, the reader must look among the C's in Part III of the index, where her individual number will be found to be 498. And then by referring to that number in the genealogy, her name and marriage will be found at page 52; followed by this mark †, to indicate that further particulars of her and her husband and descendants, will be found in their proper places, according to that individual number, in a subsequent part of the genealogy.

But to find Lucy Elliot, the eldest daughter, wife of Rev. Seth Swift, the reader must look among the Elliots in Part XI of the index, where her individual number will be found to be 2165. And by referring to that number in the genealogy, her name and marriage will be found at page 190; followed by the same †, to indicate that further particulars of her and her husband and descendants will be found in their proper places, according to that individual number, in a subsequent part of the genealogy.

A few of the descendants of the eighth generation have individual numbers; and those numbers will be found in the proper Parts of the index, opposite the names of those descendants. Only a few of the descendants of the eighth generation, and none of the ninth and tenth generations, have individual numbers. But such descendants, in the genealogy, are recorded immediately after, and in connection with their last ancestor who has an individual number. And in the proper Parts of the index, their names will be found opposite the individual number of such ancestor, followed by this mark †, to indicate that the reader must look for the record of such descendant, in the genealogy, in connection with the record of the ancestor to whom that individual number belongs.

Thus: to find Major-General John Sedgwick, of the eighth generation, the reader must search for his Christian name among the Sedgwicks, in Part VII of the index, where the individual number of his mother Olive Collins (3096) will be found opposite his name, with this mark †, annexed to it (3096,†) to indicate that his record will be found in connection with hers in the genealogy.

Part VII of the index contains the names of husbands, not of the Hyde blood, who have married female descendants of William Hyde. Such husbands are alphabetically arranged in the index, under their family names; and those having the same family name, are also arranged alphabetically according to the initial of the Christian name. The name of the wife, with her individual number, is set opposite the name of the husband; to show that the particulars of the husband must be sought for in the genealogy in connection with that individual number. And if she has no individual number, the number of her ancestor who has an individual number is added to her name in this Part of the index, with this mark †; to indicate that the particulars of the husband must be sought for in the genealogy in connection with that individual number.

Part XIII of the index, contains the names of wives, not of the Hyde blood, who have married male descendants of William Hyde. Such wives are alphabetically arranged in the index under their family names; and those having the same family names are also arranged alphabetically, according to the initial of the Christian name. The name of the husband, with his individual number, is set opposite the name of the wife, to show that the particulars of the wife must be sought for in the genealogy in connection with that individual number. And if he has no individual number, the number of his next ancestor who has an individual number is added to his name, in this Part of the index, with this mark †; to indicate that the particulars of the wife must be sought for in the genealogy in connection with that individual number.

In some cases, duplicate and triplicate numbers will be found. But in such case there are marks of distinction in the index, as well as in the body of the genealogy; as 468, 468a, 468b, &c. The names of descendants who died in infancy or in childhood, are not contained in the index.
